Adding a second democratic name to the list of political aspirants seeking primary nominations to major county offices, Chester Link, Beaverton route 1, poultry farmer, filed in the county clerk's office here Monday as a candidate for nomination as sheriff.

J. W. Conell, republican incumbent, was one of the first among present office-holders in the county.

Chester Link

house to file for re-nomination. It is reported that Clem Eslinger, billiard and bowling establishment proprietor here, is considering filing for that office on the republican ticket.

Another name was added this week to the many county possibilities for representative to the legislature from this district with a report that Leon Walker, 32, Forest Grove newspaper pressman, has been mentioned as a prospective republican candidate for this office.

Link, the latest primary candidate to file, is 42 years of age, a native of Oregon and an overseas veteran. He was wounded in action in the World War. In 1924 he completed a course at Oregon State college in poultry and has since taken an active part in that industry.

He is married and has two step-daughters, both of whom are graduates of Beaverton high school. For some time he has worked for the U. S. forestry service. His hobbies are "Experience, Economy, Efficiency."

Only addition this week to the 11 filed previously for precinct committees was Anna Kruger, Beaverton route 2, republican, seeking nomination as candidate for precinct No. 41.

School Lunches
(By State Board of Health)
"Attention: Parents, teachers and school officials—Please!

"First: The Health of Food Handlers. These persons should all fulfill the requirements enforced upon those who work in restaurants and other establishments where food is served. Those persons should be free from venereal disease, for example. It is particularly important that they not be carriers of such diseases as typhoid, dysentery, diphtheria, etc. They should be persons of clean personal habits. They should not work with food when they are suffering with acute respiratory infections, particularly colds or tuberculosis.

"Second: Proper equipment. The matter of equipment is important. We understand that some places are being prepared in some places which are quite inadequate. In some places an attempt is being made to prepare these hot lunches under conditions which are almost impossible. The matter of flies is an important consideration in this case. The means of disposal of garbage and dishwasher must be taken into consideration. In the facilities for sanitary dishwashing are very important, too. It must not be assumed that equipment is everything. The best equipment improperly handled will end up in the most terrible condition, while a capable and efficient person, on the other hand, can get up a good meal under the most unfavorable conditions and not miss the absence of elaborate equipment. The facilities should be adequate and the help should be conscientious, intelligent and clean.

"Third: The Matter of Food Spoilage. This subject will need to be given close thought and attention. Many of these kitchens will not have a refrigerator for example. In such case, left-overs must not be used. With careful planning, of course, there should be no left-overs, because the cook will know how many persons there are to feed. Particular care must be given to the handling of meats. There will be a tendency to use hamburger and other ground mixed meats. There are two serious sources of danger. One of them is the use of inferior meat in the first place and the other one is the possibility of contamination in the process of mixing. Hamburger and meat loaf had better be marked off. Likewise, there is danger in the use of wieners, frankfurters or "hot dogs." They must not be used unless they have been very thoroughly cooked. The tendency is to feel that these foods have been cooked once and are in no need of being cooked again. If chicken is donated, one must be sure that it has not been permitted to spoil, and steamed chicken or chicken soup must not be used as a left-over. It is doubtful if there is any more potent cause of trouble than left-over steamed chicken.

"Fourth: The Milk Supply. In many places farmers are donating milk. In such case the milk nearly always is unpasteurized. It will be impossible for the school to pasteurize the milk because it will have no good facilities for such a process, and furthermore, will find it difficult to get it cool again. There might be a tendency for the person donating the milk to feel that since he is not being paid for it he can hardly be expected to go to a lot of trouble with it. The possibility of typhoid fever, tuberculosis, undulant fever, septic sore throat and other epidemics after the use of such milk must be borne in mind. Children do not drink milk worse than they do food, but unclean milk is the most dangerous food which a child can be served.

"Fifth: The Possibility of Botulism Intoxication. This occurs from home-canned foods which are tainted and is a very grave danger. There is not much danger from the various fruits or soured foods, but meats or vegetables are particularly liable to this taint. Green beans, peas, corn, spinach and all other greens should be watched as they are likely to be dangerous if improperly canned. All such canned foods should be thoroughly boiled for ten minutes before being used. This will make them safe. The boiling is not for the purpose of cooking the food—it has already been cooked—but it is for the purpose of destroying botulinus bacillus which may be lurking in the can. It must be borne in mind that such food appears to be perfectly good. It has no odor or taste to indicate that it is tainted. As a matter of fact it gives no sign whatever that it is unfit for use. Once the symptoms of the intoxication appear, it is too late to do anything for the victim and death usually follows.

"Sixth: Supervision. Unless these hot lunches are correctly supervised by persons trained in dietetics and sanitation, it is only a matter of time until some serious accident will happen. This will not only injure the children affected, but will jeopardize the entire school lunch program. We need the co-operation of all those of you who are vitally concerned. The possibilities of an accident in this program are large and we shall be living in a fool's paradise if we refuse to recognize them."

Samaritan Preacher Prays, Gets Needed Food, Supplies

Rev. George Winniman and children disciples. . . . Prayer is their purchaser.

STUDENTS of the Bible know well the record of the Lord as a provider, but it took the Rev. George Winniman of Atlanta, Ga., to bring this fact to the attention of a flippant world of 1940.

It's the power of prayer that has enabled Rev. Winniman to establish, equip and support the modest little combination mission and convalescent hospital he operates in Georgia's capital city. He has prayed for bread and meat, for a piano, for clothing for bedding, and even for an ambulance siren.

The minister is proud that he's never asked anyone for anything—the Lord excepted—and says he has never failed to get what he prays for. Individuals donate food, clothing and money; bakers give left-over bread, dairies send surplus milk and markets contribute vegetables that didn't sell.

OCCASIONALLY the mission keeper has had to tax the power of prayer. The Rev. Winniman and his associates had planned a big dinner for some 850 unfortunates last Christmas but only 40 of 400 expected pounds of chicken had arrived for the meal the night before.

It was too late to get other meat, and anyway, the mission had spent all its money. So Preacher Winniman went upstairs and prayed. About a o'clock representatives of a local organization called, said they had 400 pounds of spare hams, and could the Atlanta Home Mission use any?

Better illustration is the story of Rev. Winniman's ambulance, which he has been operating for two years. First he prayed for the machine, and got an unemployed carpenter trained for the job vehicle that had been sitting in erty just east of the ball park be adopted. A resolution was passed authorizing the commission's recommendation and calling for a public hearing on the change at 8 p. m. Wednesday, March 13. The zone change will affect the property lying between the ball park and the east city limits and between the highway and a line extended from the north boundary of the park, reclassifying this small piece of land from a residential to a business zone.

Mr. P. L. Patterson appeared before the city fathers in behalf of the Garden club of the Hillsboro Coffee club with an offer to plant trees and shrubs in the triangle of city property between the old and new highways at the bend in front of Shute park. Permission to proceed with this beautification project was granted.

Agreement Authorized
An agreement between the city, the American Legion and the Hillsboro Firemen's association for management of the municipal baseball park was authorized by a resolution, but action was deferred until the contract with the firemen operation of Shute park during the annual Happy Days celebration here.

H. L. Merickie, who appeared in behalf of William Hanson, to erect a small office building on the Jennie Canill lot next to J. C. Penney on Main street. Such a permit can only be granted, the council informed Merickie, if the building is to conform with the fire zone requirements that the structure be fire-proof.

Permit Granted
Permit was granted the Lester Lackey garage, 365 East Main, to install a second curb gasoline pump. A resolution was passed authorizing final settlement of old street liens against the E. L. Johnson property on Third avenue. The agreed settlement price was $1149.42 plus interest at the rate of 1 1/2 per cent since May 12, 1934.

An ordinance officially creating the utility commission appointed at a special meeting last week was adopted. Permission was granted to both the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars to conduct annual Poppy sales in Hillsboro sometime in May. The council also endorsed letters from the two veterans groups asking that steps be taken to stop the practice of "racketeer selling" of veterans' placards for store windows.

Action was deferred on the request of H. E. Webb for a license to sell both package and draft beer at a confectionery to be established on Adams street west of Adams. Also laid on the table was a bill submitted by Paul Patterson for legal services over the past seven years in connection with the city's campaign to acquire the water system here. All other bills for the month of February were authorized.
