

Wolf Creek Map Sent to Washington

This map, sent to Washington, D. C., this week by E. J. Griffith, Oregon WPA administrator, shows the present completed portion of the Wolf Creek highway and the section proposed for immediate completion under a new federal allotment. Solid line—completed highway open to traffic; heavy broken line—section proposed for immediate completion; double line—surveyed only, would be completed except for grading under proposed project; light broken line—already graded, proposed for immediate paving.—(Cut courtesy Oregonian)

Completion of Wolf Creek Road Urged by WPA

Anticipating early completion of the Wolf Creek highway because of its increasing military significance under the national defense program, E. J. Griffith, state WPA administrator, Thursday forwarded to Washington, D. C., a $1,066,785 WPA project which would join the east and west extremities of the road, now under construction, leaving only an 11.85 mile section of surfacing to finish the "shortcut to the sea."

The section of super-highway for which Griffith has urged speedy completion is the 30.58 mile stretch between Sunset Camp and Portland, including sections in various stages of construction.

Only section on which no work has yet been done is the 11.85-mile stretch between North Plains and Cedar Mill, which would be cleared and graded under the new project, but not paved. A supplementary WPA allocation would be asked later for this final work, Griffith said.

Links Nears Opening
Of the remaining 18.73 miles in uncompleted highway, the 7.6-mile link from Sunset camp to Manning is nearest completion and will be opened next year. Hard surface has been laid down from Sunset camp to the western extremity of the Strassel tunnel and a crushed rock roadbed is already down from Manning to the east tunnel portal.

Clearing and grading is under way on the next seven-mile stretch between Manning and North Plains. Grading has been completed for some time on the 11.85-mile eastern extremity. A four-mile link connecting Cedar Mill with the four-lane Canyon highway near Sylvan, and work has been in process for some time on other subsidiary approaches through the heights to the Wolf Creek route.

With opening of the Manning-Sunset camp sector, tentatively set for next fall or before, coast-bound traffic will be onto the Wolf Creek route at Manning.

County Draftees For First 200 Numbers Listed

to be drafted in order to fill the quota and that inavailability of potential draftees in some localities will make it necessary to continue calling up men until the quota is filled with serial numbers far beyond the estimated first 650.

It was estimated with assured safety that any registrant whose number was not called in the first 1500 numbers drawn definitely will not be called up for service in the first training group of 800,000. It was also said that numbers which turned up after the 5000th drawing had been made from the bowl stand a good chance of never being called up. Oregon's quota for the first draft call on November 18 will be only 83 men.

A list in order of the first 200 serial numbers affecting Washington county registrants follows. There were 2729 numbers drawn at the national lottery when Washington county's 200th serial number turned up. With two men having corresponding serial numbers in about two cases out of three, the first 200 serial numbers in order represent a potential county conscription army of 330 men. The following list gives order number, first, serial number second, and names.
