Practical Man Vs. Theorist, Declares Hare

BLOOMING—W. G. Hare spoke to a full house at the republican rally here Friday night. Mr. Hare said he thought this the most important political campaign ever held in his life time. He compared the two candidates as a practical man against a theorist. He also gave interesting details of the backgrounds of the candidates, comparing them as a self-made man and a money-made man. He closed his address with his expression of hope for the future. Mr. Sturgis represented the young republicans.

Sprague Sees Willkie Strength

(By A. L. Lindbeck)

SALEM, October 30—Governor Charles A. Sprague, who recently completed a two-week stump tour through the midwest in behalf of Wendell Willkie and Charles L. McNary, believed the republican ticket has that area "in the bag."

He made the trip with his son Wallace, visiting 14 states traveling by train, auto, bus and airplane. In eight of the states he made speeches before clubs, political groups and at impromptu gatherings, and over the radio, once on a state-wide hookup in Oklahoma.

"In the midwest Willkie prospects are certainly excellent. In the north-central mid-west it is almost a certainty that the republicans will prevail, with good prospects of carrying Missouri and Oklahoma as well," Sprague said.

"In all these states," he continued, "There is a marked defection among the democrats swing away from Mr. Roosevelt on the third term issue."

"I found Charley Mac (Oregon's Sen. Charles L. McNary) in high favor all through the agricultural area. The farmers have watched his career and his policies for a good many years and they like the way he does things."

"Political leaders in most of the states I visited believe the republican campaign they have been conducting will bear fruit. They have been in politics a long time, and they certainly wouldn't be fooling themselves."

It was the first stump tour of its kind the governor had ever taken, he having been a political amateur until he was rocketed into the governor's chair in 1938 on an immense boom. The frequent talking he did on the trip left his voice obviously tired but he said "It was a strenuous campaign but I enjoyed it."

Peculiar weather during the first weeks of October is playing havoc with the 1940 turkey crop, the department of agriculture reports.

Twelve Oregon counties—one-third of the state's total—are now entirely free of either bond or warrant debt, according to a survey just completed by Walter E. Pearson, state treasurer.

The list of debt-free counties includes Clatsop, Columbia, Douglas, Lake, Linn, Marion, Polk, Sherman, Tillamook, Umatilla, Union, and Washington. Several other counties are expected to unload their debt burdens during the next year, according to Pearson, who predicts that, barring unforeseen circumstances, the public debt burden in Oregon, state and municipal as well as county, will continue to decrease year by year.

The remaining 24 counties are still shouldering a debt load aggregating $15,351,451, but, huge as this figure may seem, it is $1478,716 less than the county debt load of two years ago and represents a decrease of $2,199,182 from the net debt of the several counties only a year ago.

The importance of the national election November 5 has so far overshadowed state issues that many persons have nearly forgotten that Oregon has several interesting state races upcoming.

Most important state races will be between Leslie M. Scott of Portland and Al Brown, also Portland, for state treasurer, and between incumbent I. H. Van Winkle, republican, and Bruce Spaulding, Dallas, for attorney general.

Scott, republican candidate to succeed Walter Pearson as state treasurer, is given the edge over
