

Sales Tax Seen As the Only Way to Increase Old Age Pensions

(By Vernon Williams)

STATE HOUSE, Salem, Feb. 12.—When Frank Loneragan of Multnomah county dropped his sales tax bill in the house last week, the repercussions could be heard all over the state. Walls, loud and long, came from the Grange, Labor, Commonwealth and several other organizations. Mr. Loneragan was immediately presented with a beautiful brick house—one brick at a time. The bill would set aside 60 per cent of the take for old-age pensions and 40 per cent would go as offset against real property tax. It is estimated the measure would raise an additional $3,000,000 a year for the oldsters. This much is certain, according to those who should know: If old-age pensions are to be increased, and most of the lawmakers agree they should be, a new source of revenue must be found to raise the necessary money. And a sales tax looks like the only way out. No other taxable source can stand another $3,000,000 in addition to the tax now being paid. Incidentally, if there is any one of the 60 members in the house who can successfully steer this bill through, it's Mr. Loneragan, who knows how to get things done.

Public hearings on many bills, at times are nothing more than Roman holidays staged for the benefit of John Q. Public. The lawmakers like to hold such hearings because it gives Mr. Citizen a chance to blow off steam. He may get his name in the paper, and then again it proves to his fellow-townsmen he is some pumpkin, because the lawmakers listened to what he had to say. As a rule such hearings are nothing more nor less than loud and loud talkfests. Seldom does such oratory ever change a vote of the committeemen who sit in judgment on the bill and report out the measure. Do the house or do not pass. Just like the long-winded talks that take place on the floor of the house and senate on some hotly contested bill, not very often, if ever, will such speeches change a single vote. The average lawmaker knows in advance how he is going to vote, and all the talking in kingdom-come will not change him.

Did you know that a motion to adjourn lays a bill on the table, to move the previous question is never debatable. . . . But a motion to adjourn sine die is debatable. . . . That when a bill is indefinitely postponed it takes a two-thirds, or 40 votes, to bring it up again. . . . That to reconsider a vote it only requires a majority of the quorum present. . . . But to pass a bill it takes 31 votes at all times. . . . That a member can't vote if he is not within the bar of the house—inside the railing, although he may be in the house proper. . . . That the sergeant-at-arms can arrest a member and force him to answer roll call, unless excused by the speaker. . . . That a legislator is immune from arrest by civil authorities during the session, except for certain federal offenses. . . . That a stenographer or secretary who gets $5 a day regardless of how long the session runs. . . . and the lawmakers only $3 a day for the first 40 days. . . . That about one-half of the so-called stenographers and secretaries don't know the difference between a typewriter and a mowing machine.

In the after dinner speaking at a banquet Thursday night Edwin Quier and Hollis Hartwick both made the finals and were presented with plaques, when the finals were run off, Edwin Quier won fourth. Twenty-eight schools were represented.

Funds Not Available When fires start in these uncontrolled areas, there is always doubt as to whose duty it is to fight them. Funds are not available in any one of the bordering agencies to fight fires outside the express bounds of their territory and the result often is that fires are allowed to get out of control before they spread to territories over which there is some authority, according to William Dillon, Hillsboro fire marshal, who was one of the leaders in earlier meetings which have resulted in the proposed law.

In Washington county, Zone 3 would be the irregular territory left after incorporated cities, rural fire protection districts, fire patrol areas and forest lands are lifted out.

Local Highlights Of Legislature

Representative H. T. Hesse had a severe dizzy spell late Wednesday following adjournment. He was removed to the Salem General hospital by ambulance and recovered rapidly. Saturday noon he left the hospital for his residence in Salem at 600 N. Cottage St. His doctor advised him to rest until the latter part of this week before returning to the legislature.

Thos. H. Tongue, prominent attorney of Hillsboro, visited with Representatives Hesse and Kurath the first of the week.

J. Herb, formerly of Hillsboro, now employed at the State House, gave us a friendly call Monday. He was very much interested in reading a copy of the Hillsboro Argus on the desk.

Hon. John A. Thornburgh, prominent banker of Forest Grove, and largest grower of filberts in the world, and former member of the house, was at the legislature Wednesday. Mr. Thornburgh received courtesies of the senate on motion of Senator Fisher and Senator Kaufman.

Widening the Tualatin Valley highway for four lane traffic through Washington county is receiving united support. The state highway commission has been receiving numerous petitions and resolutions of late supporting said project.

Louis Garbarini, formerly of the Barnes district, and student of Barnes school, had a chat with Senator Fisher Monday. Mr. Garbarini is now located at Brooks, and is growing onions on a large scale in the Lake Labish district. His 1941 crop will be 21 acres to onions.

The Washington county delegation during the past week has received a number of resolutions from incorporated towns in Washington county for supporting the League of Oregon Cities program, for a share of the gasoline tax funds to be used upon city streets. We will be pleased to receive resolutions from all of the incorporated towns in Washington county in support of this delegation, which is House Bill 348.

Judge R. Frank Peters, former member of the house and now circuit judge for Washington and Tillamook counties, on his way home to Hillsboro Monday called at the legislature and met many of his former colleagues.

Ivy Syverson, who operates one of Hillsboro's beauty parlors, was at the legislature Tuesday in behalf of House Bill No. 206. The beauty operators are doing so much to make Oregon beautiful and deserve full support at this time. The county court of Washington county, Judge H. D. Kerkman and Commissioners James Lewis and J. W. Hughes, were in Salem Monday on business before the forestry department. During their stay they visited the senate and received the courtesies of the senate on motion of Senator Fisher.
