Law Affecting Motorists Cited

now governing cars on Oregon highways. Action of the legislature clothes the state highway commission with authority to designate speeds on any state highway and erect signs giving this speed. A state speed control board consisting of the secretary of state, the superintendent of state police and the chairman of the state highway commission with similar authority to designate speeds on country road or city streets was created. The new law retains the "basic rule" feature of the previous rulings but changes the enforcement and judicial setup. The basic rule states that no person shall drive a vehicle upon a highway at a speed greater than is reasonable and prudent having due regard to the traffic, surface and width of the highway and the hazard at intersection and other conditions existing. The new law establishes any speed in excess of 55 miles per hour (or other posted speed) as "prima facie" evidence of violation of the basic rule. Example Cited: In other words, if an officer arrests a person for driving more than 55 miles per hour (or exceeding the posted speed) the burden of proof is upon the driver to show that he was exercising reasonable care and caution. However, if the arrest is made when the posted speed has not been exceeded, the arresting officer must prove that the motorist was driving the car in a dangerous manner. Motorists renewing their driver's license this spring will find that the cost has jumped from one dollar to one dollar fifty cents. The extra revenue will be put into a fund to pay the hospital bills of those hurt in accidents in the event that the bills are not paid by the patient within a period of 90 days, the motor association report concludes.

Bicycle Fatality Record Unmarred

Oregon went through the first quarter of 1941 without one bicycle traffic fatality, Earl Snell, secretary of state, disclosed today. Last year there were two bicycle fatalities for the corresponding period. Bicycle fatalities in the year 1940 were reduced 46 per cent from 1939, the first year deaths from accidents of this type had shown a decrease in Oregon since 1931. Much of the credit for the reduction in bicycle fatalities is given the various bicycle regulatory ordinances which have been enacted by many Oregon communities during the past two years. More than 20 cities and towns in this state have adopted such ordinances and several other localities are considering similar legislation at present.

Wheat Countries All in Same Boat As to Surpluses

American wheat growers are by no means alone in their efforts to control the world wheat surplus in producing exporting countries, according to Will Steen, chairman of the state AAA committee in Oregon, who has recently received word of steps being taken in Canada, Argentina and Australia. American wheat growers will no doubt be faced with the problem of deciding on the adoption of wheat marketing quotas, says Steen. A tentative date for the election has been set for May 31. If, as expected, the prospective wheat supplies by May 15 are above the limit set in the law of 1938, a marketing quota election must be held. If the quota is approved by growers, the government loans will continue, which constitutes one of America's chief methods of maintaining wheat growers' incomes while exercising a limit on production. Youths Earning Funds for Summer Scholarship funds for local Boy Scouts and 4-H youths who are eager to attend summer camp sessions of the various youth organizations made available through the subscription soliciting plan currently being offered by the Hillsboro Argus. A sizable body of junior Argus representatives is already spending spare moments to solicit subscriptions and earn the generous commissions attached to both new and renewal orders for the paper. The offer has been adopted by some 4-H club leaders and other organizations as a group project and a means of raising funds to send one among them to a distant convention or meeting. Youths interested in the scholarship plan are invited to contact Mabel Grass, Argus circulation manager, and arrange to participate in its benefits.

their farmers by offering to buy their wheat outright, but this has led to difficulties. Argentine farmers are assured of about 55 cents a bushel and Canadian farmers of about 50 cents. Both governments say now they cannot continue to buy unlimited amounts of wheat unless foreign markets re-open. Canadian growers still have much of last year's crop piled out under temporary shelters because supplies far exceed storage capacity of the country. Australia guarantees wheat farmers a price of about 56½ cents a bushel on an annual crop of not more than 140 million bushels. In return for this guarantee the growers must agree to market their wheat through the government and carry out certain practices designed to reduce wheat acreage. In Argentina it is estimated that nearly 200 million bushels of wheat will be available for export in 1941. Canada will have more than 700 million bushels. Both of these amounts are considerably larger than supplies on hand a year ago. Because of drought Australia does not have large export supplies, but even so these cannot move freely through military blockades.
