News Then . . . Remember When?

Not so long ago—in October, 1924—this was one of Washington county's latest improvements, a streamlined school bus boasting a "one-man top," leather upholstered seats and everything. When the picture was run in the Argus of October 8, 1924, this caption was used: "The days when school pupils were forced to walk several miles through the mud to school are a thing of the past. Now they are taken back and forth in big buses that are used for that purpose alone. The picture shows the bus of John Bose with children he transports to and from school."
