Superintendent of City Grade Schools Extends Invitation

In view of the fact that National Education week begins November 9, J. W. Poynter, superintendent of Hillsboro grade schools, has written a letter to parents and friends of the community, inviting them to visit the schools during regular operation.

Mr. Poynter's letter: "The month of November brings with it an annual event celebrating universal education in the United States. This event lasts one week beginning with Sunday, November 9. Throughout the nation, schools are inviting their patrons to make themselves more thoroughly acquainted with the schools.

"Here in Hillsboro the elementary schools wish for patrons to see the schools as they are operated from day to day. Consequently no special programs will be put on for our patrons. It is the day by day functioning of the schools that count most. Special programs serve best to exhibit the wares of the gifted and do not in any manner of means show up the real work of the school.

"So we invite you to visit school next week and would hope that your visit will bring you back again and again. A single visit at school is neither fair to yourself nor to the school. What you see on one day may vary greatly with what you will see at another time. Any person desiring to have intimate knowledge of the school's activities should visit often enough to get a cross section of the whole program. If, then, you have not been visiting schools somewhat regularly, let American Education Week be the starter for you."

People Co-operate At Cornelius

CORNELIUS—The blackout Friday night was a success so far as cooperation on the part of the citizens was concerned. Not a light could be seen on Main street, no cars approached to be stopped and all deputies and Boy Scouts got on their beats in orderly fashion. The citizenry was much disappointed over the lack of flying fortresses. The big ships had been ordered grounded because of fog, until 7 a. m. Saturday.

Myers Pump Firm Sets Pace in Field For Past 70 Years

Early in 1870, F. E. Myers, a country boy, opened a small retail implement store in Ashland, Ohio. For several years his was a one man business, but as time went on his business grew, and with its growth his brother, P. A. Myers, joined him.

Sensing the need of better pumping equipment for the farm, "P.A." being mechanically inclined, developed and patented an entirely new type of pump—double acting hand force pump which was soon to become the nucleus for the future growth of the company.

Historically, the first carload of Myers Pumps to be sold was shipped to Kansas City, Missouri. This important event occurred in 1886. The first real milestone in the progress of the brothers had been reached, for this marked the start of quantity production.

New and improved types were developed and added as pump sales increased. First came new and original styles of hand and windmill, well, house and cistern pumps, pump stands and tank pumps. Spray pumps soon followed. Bulldozer power pumps then came along, this line being replaced a few years later by Self-Oiling Power Spray Pumps.

Prior to, and during this period, other lines were also being added. Hay Unloading Stays in 1884, and in 1901 Myers Stoyon Door Hangers were patented and introduced. In more recent years Myers Sump Pumps, Double Acting Cylinders, Condensate Units, Centrifugal Pumps and Ejecto Pumps have made their appearance. Today the Myers Line is complete with pumps for every purpose.

As the years have gone by, addition after addition has been made to the Myers plant until today it is the largest of its kind in the world.

Myers Products are sold everywhere with an Export Office in New York City, five strategically located branch distributing houses, hundreds of general agencies and thousands of dealers in the United States, Canada and every civilized country in the world.

The P. E. Myers & Bro. Co. is a pioneer pump manufacturing plant. To its founders and to their successors must be given the credit for much of the progress and advancement in producing new and improved methods of pumping water, spraying, banding hay and other grains and installing barn, garage and other doors.
