Dogs Poisoned

An unknown person or persons Saturday night poisoned a bulldog belonging to William Robinson, an elderly resident. The dog was alive during the night, but was found dead early Sunday morning. The poisoning seems to be a sequel to an attempted entry of the Robinson home one night last week, when an intruder who attempted to force his way into the house was frightened away by the dog. The elderly man, who lives alone on his small berry farm, was badly broken up by the loss of his pet. A dog belonging to Lee Balcum, of Midway also became the victim of poison on Sunday night. The dog was let out of the house late that evening and a few minutes later was found dead.

Contests Held at St. Mary's Valley

ST. MARY'S OF THE VALLEY ACADEMY—The various activities arranged in the program for Catholic Book Week kept a spirit of friendly competition humming in the assembly rooms and library throughout the week. Keen interest was taken in the Book Review contest. Prizes were won as follows: Division 1, Dorothy Moore; Division 2, Rita Schneider; and Division 3, Geraldine O'Connor. Original work of exceptional excellence was illustrated in the poster contest. Winners were: Angelina Sohler, first prize; Rita Schneider, second; while honorable mention was given Betty Bauley, Georgia Hlavinka, and Helen Marie Kreutzer. Attracting the serious, as well as the artistic and the curious, book displays in the assembly and library aroused much enthusiasm. Especially interesting was the unique feature of character dolls; among them, Catherine Tekawitha, Haydn, and Father Marquette.

The climax of the local program was reached in the symposium of modern Catholic authors, which was given by the senior English class, Thursday afternoon. A visit of students and faculty members to the Portland Catholic Book Fair furnished a fitting close to the program of the week.

Navy Opportunities Cited by Speaker

Need for men to man the new two-ocean navy was pointed out at a patriotic program in keeping with Armistice Day at the Rotary club luncheon Thursday by O. L. Anderson, chief yeoman with the U. S. navy recruiting office in Portland. The navy, he pointed out, is truly our first line of defense. Program was in charge of O. B. Gates.

Training opportunities in the navy were cited by the speaker, who said advancement is dependent on individual initiative. Boys under 21 years of age must have the consent of their parents and can enlist in the naval reserve for the period of emergency or for six years in the regular navy. A moving picture showing U. S. submarines in action was presented.

William O'Leary of Pacific university sang two vocal numbers. He was accompanied by Miss Wagner.
