

Blackout Vehicle Rules; Dimout Warning Issued

Regulations governing blackouts and the control of traffic during air raids, whether occurring at night or during daylight hours, are set forth in a proclamation by Governor Earl Snell. Auxiliary emergency vehicles, which will be permitted to operate only under the direction of authorized personnel acting in accordance with orders from civilian defense authorities, are defined.

Each of these vehicles must be identified by a white pennant mounted in an upright position at the forward left side of the vehicle and visible from both sides. On this pennant will be the basic insignia of the Office of Civilian Defense in red.

Such vehicles must also be provided with a mask or shield for use during hours of darkness, to be fastened securely over the lighted front headlamp of automobile or truck or auxiliary headlight of a motorcycle. It must be of opaque translucent green about three inches in diameter.

Written Permit Needed
No such vehicle may be equipped with the approved devices or permitted to operate during air raid or blackout without a written emergency vehicle permit, issued for that particular vehicle and its driver, and accessible at all times. Such permits will be issued by Governor Snell on recommendation of the county defense co-ordinators. County co-ordinators have been requested to furnish the State Defense Council, before May 1, with an estimate of the number of such permits that will be required within their counties. Permits may be revoked at any time due to change in assignment of duty of the person to whom issued or for unauthorized or improper use of same.

Authorized emergency vehicles, classified as such under state statute, such as fire apparatus, police cars and ambulances, may operate when displaying an illuminated red spotlight, either day or night, during periods and in areas of air raid alarm, but such vehicles and operators are eligible to apply for and receive identifying insignia and permits which may serve to expedite their travel by facilitating their identification.

These vehicles may only be operated when: (a) Responding to a fire alarm, (b) Going to, or transporting, a person in apparent need of immediate emergency medical or surgical care, (c) Responding to some other emergency involving the immediate protection of life or property, including emergency repairs immediately necessary to control or restore gas, electric, water or communication service, (d) Transporting essential personnel to posts of emergency duty in compliance with specific orders of civilian defense authorities in cases where such personnel cannot reach such posts of duty within five minutes by any other available means, or (e) Returning to a dispatching station to receive further emergency orders.

Military Vehicles Passed
Vehicles under the control of the armed forces of the United States, or of the State Guard, readily identifiable as such acting under official orders, may travel during periods and in areas of air raid alarm with no additional identification, permit or authorization. Operators may apply for and receive identifying insignia and permits, however, to expedite their travel by facilitating their identification. Private automobiles operated by military or naval personnel will not be permitted to operate during air raids unless equipped with authorized insignia and permit.

No permits will be issued personnel that can reach their posts of duty within five minutes on foot. The State Defense Council points out that it is imperative that no vehicles be permitted to operate during such emergencies unless in a vital service.

Face Expulsion
Washington county residents who violate dimout regulations face expulsion from the dimout area, according to word given all western Oregon county civilian defense councils by Defense Administrator Jerry Owen. Earlier Owen received a communication from Major General Robert H. Lewis, commanding the northwestern sector of the western defense command, quoting Lieutenant General John L. De Witt, who was critical of residents of dimout areas who are failing to comply with the law. Military authorities declare that repeated violations of dimout regulations place in jeopardy the safety of the Pacific coast and that persons who fail to observe them cannot be permitted to remain on the coastal frontier.

Judge Long to Serve as Major

Circuit Judge Donald E. Long of Multnomah county court of domestic relations and former Hillsboro resident has been commissioned a major in the provost marshal general's department for military government service, it was announced.

Judge Donald E. Long

Long is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Long of Hillsboro and attended Hillsboro schools and Georgetown university at Washington, D. C.

Judge Long, who had three years of military experience during World War I, is awaiting orders to report for active duty. After the war Judge Long served for nearly three years with the federal bureau of investigation. He practiced law in Portland 10 years before his appointment to the municipal bench in 1934. He has served as a circuit judge presiding over the court of domestic relations and the juvenile court of Multnomah county six years and is now on the first year of his second six-year term.

Long will receive a leave of absence and the governor will appoint a judge pro tempore to preside over his court during his military service.

Mrs. Long and their three children will remain in Portland for the present.

It's "au revoir" but not goodbye,

War needs must be given first consideration . . . and we, in common with all Americans, must step aside and let pass the legions marching on to Victory. This means that in our industry we must willingly accept and adjust ourselves to the present handicaps of rationed materials and curtailed transportation facilities. We do this gladly.

The Bohemian Breweries has attempted to serve you adequately and well. Now, because circumstances beyond our control do not permit us to continue to do so, we have no choice but to regretfully withdraw from your market until happier days come again . . . but we withdraw for the duration only.
