

All Wood Prize product of the loggers and lumbermen of the Douglas fir and Sitka spruce is the Mosquito Bomber of the Royal Air Force, according to the West Coast Lumbermen's association. In his new book, "The Air Offensive Against Germany," Allan A. Michie reports that a Mosquito made the 1500-mile trip between England and Genoa in 3½ hours—or an average speed of 428 miles per hour. It was a flight of Mosquitos that laid the first bombs of 1943 on Berlin. This was a daylight raid on the 10th Nazi anniversary. It ran the gauntlet of the Luftwaffe's fighters, into their rat holes. Recently Mosquitos bombed Berlin twice in one week. The Mosquito is all-wood—plywood and spruce from the North Pacific coast. Airplane engineers estimate that its lack of "rivet bumps" gives it 20 per cent more speed than a comparable metal plane could attain. So fast is this as in a steep turn, condenses water vapor, so that each tip may see into the trailing long silver ribbon. The Mosquito bomber dramatically illustrates why the War Manpower Commission has asked all loggers in the shipyards to go back to the woods. Related examples are the motor torpedo boats that fought off the escape of the Africa Korps, the fleets of invasion barges, and the ponton bridges that spearheaded the attacks of our ground forces over rivers and swamps.

HINTS ON PRESERVING FOOD

Put beets, turnips, rutabagas, carrots in a cool ventilated place. Cut tops to 2 inches to save space.

White potatoes and onions should be kept in a dry, cool, dark place. Avoid freezing them.

Be careful not to pinch, bruise, or break the skin on any fruit or nut will enter.

Spread peaches, pears, plums to keep from bruising. Keep the ripe fruit cool. Let underripe fruits ripen at room temperature.

Apples soften as much in 1 day at 70 degrees Fahrenheit as in 2 days at 50 degrees—so keep them at the cooler temperature.

Spoilage spreads in the forgotten can or box. Frequent checkups save food.
