

Shoe Rationing Rule Hits Use Of Loose Stamp

Changes in the shoe rationing regulations which emphasize the fact that loose shoe stamps detached from ration books may be used only to make bona fide mail order purchases are contained in an amendment issued by the OPA.

OPA explained in issuing Monday's amendment that the use of detached shoe stamps has been limited to mail order purchases since the ration order became effective. Some customers and dealers, however, have assumed that the practice of selecting shoes at a store, and mailing a loose stamp for delivery, is a proper mail order transaction. Monday's action strengthens the original regulations by specifying that loose stamps are not valid for such sales. Under the new provision a shoe stamp may be detached from a war ration book and sent with a mail order only if the customer, or his agent, does not personally select or receive the shoes at the supplier's place of business.

Recognizing that a consumer may inadvertently detach his shoe stamp from his ration book without knowing that this makes the stamp void for over-the-counter purchases, the amended regulations provide that such a stamp may be exchanged at a local rationing board for a special shoe stamp good for one pair of shoes from any type of dealer. The consumer may go in person or write to the board. He need not make application on any particular form, but must present the war ration book from which the stamp was detached, state in writing why it was detached, and surrender the loose stamp. This must be done during the stamp's valid period.
