Rites Held for Con McNamer at Forest Grove

FOREST GROVE—Funeral services for Conrad W. McNamer, descendant of pioneers and one time stage driver over the Wilson river trail, were held at the Heppner Masonic hall. Archdeacon Neville Blunt officiated. Final rites and commitment were conducted at Forest Grove Saturday morning by Holbrook lodge No. 30, A. F. and A. M.

Con McNamer was born November 29, 1874, to Nehemiah and Nancy Kirts McNamer, on the old McNamer homestead at Greenville between Forest Grove and Banks. He lived on the farm until 1893 when the family moved to Forest Grove so he could enter Tualatin academy of Pacific university, where he organized and coached its first football team. In 1895, with his brother, Theodore McNamer, he established a stage line over the Wilson river into Tillamook which carried passengers over much of the present Wilson river route until the railroad was finished in 1912.

In 1897 these interests were turned over to a brother, John McNamer, and the boys joined the "gold rush" to the Klondike, leaving on the first trip of the George W. Elder to Skagway July 30. They went into the Klondike over the Chilcoot Pass and down the Yukon river. They mined in Dawson, and had claims on Bonanza creek, and discovered Emma creek which was the best paying ground in the Kuyokeek district.

While in the north, Mr. McNamer was for six months a roving reporter of the Alaskan Courier, and visited every mining camp in Alaska and the northwest territory. He made a trip to one camp 80 miles north of the Artic circle, and 150 miles from Point Barrow, the extreme northern point of Alaska; and on the supply tender, paid a visit to the trading posts on the Aleutians.

In 1904 he sold his Alaskan interests, then engaged in business in Forest Grove, and farming in the Mountaindale district until 1916, when he bought the Ione meat market. In that same year he married Sarah Rogers whom he had met while she was teaching the Recher school on the Wilson river. They made their home at Ione until 1922, when they moved to Heppner where he continued in the meat business, both as retailer and as a buyer and seller. He also was engaged in the sheep business, and in buying and shipping cattle. He took an active part in civic affairs, was a backer and director of the Heppner rodeo, and for the past two years was county commissioner.

Fraternally, Mr. McNamer was a member of the Heppner Masonic lodge and the Eastern Star of Heppner. He held a life membership in the Delphian lodge, Knights of Pythias, at Forest Grove.

Survivors are Mrs. McNamer, and his sister, Blanche Moore of Portland.
