Mrs. Person's Poem Published Hawaii

In the current issue of "Paradise of the Pacific" Hawaii's illustrated monthly magazine, appears a poem, "Steamer Day," written by Elsie Person (Mrs. J. M. Person).

Mrs. Person has for years been writing poetry for the pleasure of her family and friends, and only recently requested to be submitted for publication. Several years ago Mrs. Person visited in Hawaii and after watching the commerce of the harbor of the steamer Lurline she lingered on the pier to watch the steamer pass Diamond head. Turning to leave she found herself alone where only a few minutes before there had been a throng with sweet-scented leis bidding goodbye to loved ones and friends.

Steamer Day
I never knew that anything
Could be so lonely as a pier—
As lately thronged and heavy
With the pulsing crowd,
Gay, laughter and sweet-scented
Leis.

The whistle blows—aloha said,
Limp serpentine waves, clung
To the pier—
A few leis float disconsolately
Upon the waves
And all is still.
I never saw a pier
So lonely as a pier.
