Brush Featured In Ripley Column

A clothes brush, owned by Mrs. Fayetta Allen and used by her father, the late M. W. Johnson, for 68 years, was recently featured in Ripley's "Believe It or Not." A sketch of the brush was printed.

Mr. Johnson bought the brush in 1876, when he was in Virginia to "go west"—Missouri. He was 21 years old at the time and the brush was used by him until his death in 1943. The brushes are still in perfect condition.

Mrs. Allen has received letters from Baltimore, Md., and Des Moines, Iowa, asking for more details on the brush.

Starting of Seed Certification in State Recounted

Oregon seed certification program for 1944 got under way in some sections of the state the first week in July, marking more than 25 years of growth and development of this marketing aid in this state. Dr. D. D. Hill, head of the farm crops department of Oregon State college, which directs the certification work, points out that this project constitutes one of many outstanding examples of both foresight and insight of the late Professor G. R. Hyslop.

"Professor Hyslop foresaw the need of the certification program if Oregon were ever to achieve an important place in the seed production field," said Dr. Hill. "He instructed the first steps in such a program about 1919. Today certification is the foundation of Oregon's multi-million-dollar seed industry because without it the seed produced would either be unusable or salable only at great discounts."

Field inspection work from now through the summer will require the full-time attention of a half-dozen trained men, including the extension and assistant extension specialists in farm crops. County extension agents also give attention to the program throughout the year, through tagging service and supplementary inspections.

One of the earliest objectives of the certification program was to eliminate the serious losses from having a third of Oregon's wheat crop graded as mixed wheat, with resultant discounts. Dr. Hill recalls. After the certification program started, this percentage was steadily reduced to 8 per cent or less, where it has remained ever since. Included now in the certification program are all small grains, potatoes, hybrid seed corn, alfalfa, several kinds of clover,

Early Filing For Fuel Oil Urged Locally

Reservoir applications for fuel oil for the 1944-45 heating year should be turned in as soon as possible according to announcements by the Hillsboro Fuel Oil Board. Applications have been mailed out but are being returned very slowly since weather is the chief factor of the board. If any individual has not received the necessary application by mail, he may get one by calling at the office office. Oil users are also asked to get their equipment in better shape, as the tanks may be filled now to avoid a later shortage.

A questionnaire containing pertinent last season books of all kinds is required by the board. The many books are being lost due to circumstances beyond the control of the board. If any individual's records will be much harder to get than the others, the board will be glad to send them to you. A few actual replacement books will be made and then you can come where goods have not been shown. If food books are replaced, stamps will be tailored to date, regardless of the time lost.

Storm Clouds of Inflation Loom On Farm Horizon

The storm clouds of agricultural inflation, which have been slowly gathering since Pearl Harbor, without the last few months, are beginning to look threatening. Judging by the data collected and compiled by the bureau of agricultural economics, farmers are considerably more than definitely on the way, but at least the forecast is "uncertain."

Some of the indications of inflationary trends are:

1. Agricultural income, country bank deposits and money in circulation are at their all-time highs. Deposits are considerably more than twice what they were in 1940.
2. Production of agricultural equipment, the purchase of which normally takes a long time for the money is now under drastic wartime restrictions.
3. Land prices already have increased two-thirds above their pre-war average—much more than that in many farming areas.
4. Increasing turnover in land ownership suggests growing speculation in land.
5. The average mortgage debt per acre in sales financed by credit is now increased about 50 per cent in the last three years—the factor most indicative of future debt difficulties.

As a result of wartime conditions, the farmer has more money to spend than ever before and fewer places to spend it. This situation accounts for what the economists call "inflationary pressure." This is the pressure that has raised the clouds of agricultural inflation.

Disposing of Wartime Surplus

To consider the causes of this gathering storm clouds it is necessary to consider what the American farmer can do with his surplus wartime income.

Here are five possibilities:

1. Pay his debts.
2. Buy war bonds.
3. Buy more life insurance.
4. Increase his savings.
5. Buy land or make other investments.

Of these 5 possibilities, if the farmer does either of the first two, he is helping to prevent inflation. If he buys life insurance, he likewise is helping to prevent inflation. If he merely increases his savings in the form of bank deposits or of money in his pockets, he at least is being neutral in the battle against inflation. It is in the 5th possibility—buying land or making other investments—that the greatest danger lies.

If the farmer buys land that he currently needs at a price justified by the income that the land would bring over a long period or that he makes other investments at prices inflated by wartime conditions, then his investment is justified by post-war earning prospects, but if his investment is made at war-inflated values, the farmer is likely to be laying up trouble for himself and his action is inflationary and therefore dangerous.

Why Farmers Buy Land

The reasons the farmer buys land usually are to be found among these 4:

1. Desire to own his own farm.
2. Need for more land to produce.

English ryegrass, all of the best grasses, and several other of the forage grasses.

Dr. Hill, who is also secretary of the G. R. Hyslop agricultural research memorial fund, has contacted all county committees of this fund, suggesting increased activity to complete the work of building the fund between now and the end of the year.

Veteran Pacific Pilot of Tigard Pines for Engine

SOMEWHERE IN THE MARIANA ISLANDS—Delayed—First Lieut. E. Peterson, 26, of Tigard, is a veteran of 21 dive-bombing missions over enemy territory. He is a marine pilot, but his ambition is the same as that of a lot of kids—to be a railroad engineer. Slightly bored with the excitement of dropping explosive ordnance on Japanese targets such as gun emplacements and a radio station on Malakal island, tired of seeing tracers slash by his plane and heavy flak burst near him, Lieut. Peterson wants one thing—out of the controls of a 6-wheeler. Formerly a fireman for the Southern Pacific railroad, Peterson says "I've gotten bigger thrills out of the controls of a 6-wheeler. He attended Oregon State college for a year before joining the marines. His wife, Mrs. Elsie Peterson, lives at 2304 NE Prescott Street, Hillsboro.

Farmers' Union Hears President

Approximately 200 members and families were present at the Washington County Farmers' Union picnic held at Scout park July 16. President Grice gave a short address in which he asked for support of individual groups and organizations to keep the power dams generating power for people in both rural and city areas, and not only for corporations. He suggested contacting congressmen and giving opinions.

The state Farmers' Union picnic was announced for August 20 at Champeong. The picnic camp will be held at Camp Hillcockburn, near Molalla, for 3 days, beginning July 20.

Bake a Pie

Even the pastry can be made on an easy summer-time schedule. Here's a suggestion: make a double batch of your favorite pastry recipe, putting it together in the "cool of the morning." What you don't use immediately can be left dry, or moistened and wrapped in waxed paper, before placing it in the refrigerator. It's no more work than making a single batch, and the next time... there's the pastry all ready to use for tarts or turnovers or other fresh fruit delicacies!
