Need to Avoid Travel Stressed Before Chamber

People should avoid unnecessary travel under present crowded wartime transportation and hotel conditions, declared W. Verne McKinney, Argus editor, in speaking before the chamber of commerce Tuesday noon on reactions to his recent trip to Salt Lake, Chicago, New York and Boston in connection with his duties as president of the National Editorial association.

The local editor expressed accord with the recent request of the federal government to ban all conventions at which 50 or more people are expected to attend. He said there was still much unnecessary travel and that congestion seemed to become worse with each trip made by him since the war started. McKinney spoke before the Utah Press association at Salt Lake, visited the NEA headquarters in Chicago, met with advertising agency representatives in New York and talked before a regional meeting of New England publishers in Boston. He told of the work and objectives of the National Editorial Association with its membership of 5200 small daily and weekly newspaper publishers, particularly the formation of a Weekly Newspaper Promotion and Research Bureau this year and encouragement of weekly newspaper membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Dr. A. G. B. Bouquet of Oregon State college will speak on the progress of the Victory garden program at the luncheon meeting Tuesday, February 20. No regular luncheon meeting will be held next Tuesday because of the All Saints Guild pancake luncheon, which was announced at the meeting by Mrs. H. P. Barrows. J. W. Barney was program chairman Tuesday.

New members introduced included Lester M. Potter, manager Beckett Truck Line, Inc.; Ben Faber, Faber's Electrical Appliances; Dr. A. J. Sullens, pastor Congregational church, and Dr. S. S. Nelson.
