Deer Do Damage To Berry Crops

Methods of preventing damage by deer to strawberry crops in the Silverton area in Marion county have been the subject of considerable experimentation during the past few weeks by the Oregon State game commission's district biologist. In addition to suggestions as to improved types of fences, experiments have been carried on with fair results with different kinds of chemical repellents and flares. It is hoped by these investigations to develop methods by which game damage to agricultural crops can be controlled.

Oregon Travel Promotion Set

Oregon's importance in the travel world is emphasized by a current report from the state highway commission travel and information department which thus far in 1946 has received more than 60,000 inquiries from every section of the nation and a number of foreign countries. The inquiries, received as a result of a carefully planned promotion program, represent several times that number in potential visitors.

The travel department, which was progressively active from the time of its establishment in 1936 until World War II, remained in operation on a restricted basis during the war years laying foundations for expanded activities with the coming of peace, keeping Oregon before the public as a post-war vacationland lure.
