CAPITAL PARADE

By Murray Wade.
The republicans and the democrats will have things pretty much their own way at Oregon's general election Tuesday, November 5. So far no independent candidate has appeared, although they can file by petition or be nominated by assembly, and have until Monday, August 12, to file their candidacies. Under provisions of a law enacted in the 1945 session of the legislature the date for filing was fixed at 84 days prior to the date of the general election.

David O'Hara, head of the state elections division, says he cannot recall of there ever having been such a complete failure of the independent candidate crop as there is this year. It was expected that several hundred returned service men might run as independents but the office of the state elections has not even heard of an intention to file as an independent.

Lewis D. Griffith, chief official of the Oregon state land board for the past 10 years, died of a heart ailment Saturday. After working four years in the state land board office he was elected clerk (executive secretary) of the land board by the board then consisting of Governor Charles H. Martin, Secretary of State Earl Snel and State Treasurer Rufus C. H. Holman.

Just Passed Headed
Had state income tax collections made during the fiscal year ending June 30 been one-half of one per cent larger the total would have reached $23 million—the ancient "skiddoo" number of the populist era in Oregon—which still has some significance when we recall that over $15 million was paid during the past year in Oregon for unemployment compensation.

This year's collection was the largest in the history of the state income tax department, being $6,500,000 more than was collected the previous year. Although taxable earnings were greater the previous year the total collected was less as the 1943 legislature allowed a 39 per cent "forgiveness" deduction. Of the total receipts for the past fiscal year, $14,485,533 was paid by individuals, and $8,281,308 by corporations. The expenses of the commission for the year were $236,125, or 39 per cent of the collections, said State Tax Commissioner Earl Fisher.

Oregon Favored
There will be more federal money spent in Oregon during the present fiscal year than in any other state west of the Mississippi river. Heavy appropriations for reclamation will augment those of other departments previously announced. Blueprints will be dusted off in the state fair for gadgets, which have been awaiting peacetime clearance. Labor villages to be built near federal projects will rival the state fair for gadgets. They will be located with future use in mind after the three or more years occupation by project laborers. The houses will be revealing in design and glitzy with labor dodging devices.
