Bickford Writes Of Experiences
to the ship last night. Those subways really raise up one's sense of direction. Hope I got some good pictures of the Statue of Liberty yesterday as we came in.

May 6—Went on liberty again today, subway so crowded we missed our station, so went right on to 42nd street, walked over to Madison square and took a double decker bus and rode down to Washington square, sat on a bench and looked at the tulips and watched the people go by. We started to walk back to 42nd street but gave that up as a bad job and took the subway. From there we tried to go to a show but it was too crowded, so we walked over to Madison Square gardens and looked at the circus prices. After seeing the prices we gave that up as a bad project too and settled for the Kid from Brooklyn. The news reel showed us DeSole, which blew up over in New Jersey when they were unloading ammunition. Incidentally that is tied up for the remnants of it, a quarter of a block from where we are. It really is a mess, one wonders why it did not kill more than seven.

May 11—Bet you can't guess what I did last night, called Mr. Rudnick who used to be in Hillsboro with the eyes. They were very hospitable and invited me out to dinner last night. To meet him I went to Birds-Eye headquarters, met Mr. Buer there and had a talk about Oregon. He took me in to meet Mr. Huff. They were all fine and so very friendly. To get to his home (Mr. Rudnick's) we took a train from Grand Central Station to White Plains. Art's driver drove to the New York along the Hudson river. It was a ball ride and very pretty. When we got down to the docks what was there but the Queen Mary. It looked like it could use (The Soler) us for a life boat. Broadway looked pretty dismal last night because of the broken out due to the coal shortage, but then there were the usual crowds walking around.

May 14—Yesterday the amply officer and I went over and got $30,000 for the firm. That is just about enough to last us for a month and a half. It doesn't go very far that is just for pay days alone, just think what it would take for unknown and everything else if you added it all together.

May 16—Saturday afternoon I saw Central park. It is quite a place to be in the middle of a big city. We walked around in it a bit of it, seeing the zoo, the Bridal Path, the concert place, the two lakes and many other things. It was the most relaxing I had done for a long time, but it was worth it. Ran into a nice big thunder storm and the thunder kept up all day. Saw a dental car as it came by in one of my teeth so I will have to go and get drilled one of these days. I seem to have a little cold.

May 17—It is still raining, and I don't have the ambition to go out and walk around in it. A little bit of a cold keeps hanging on, but all this staying in and sleeping late is doing it worlds of good. Be sure to notify me if any of the kids I went in with get out before I do. I told them here "if they don't let me out in a week or a strike and be just plain useless to the navy." I read today where the 18-year-olds have had a re-prieve. Hope they don't let me out then when I am 29 draft me again. I don't think they could catch me without a good hard hunt. (Interlocking place, Saughran).

May 20—Well sit back and prepare for a long story. It started last Wednesday when I had a temperature of 102.4. As usual I said it was Cat fever, and I was given some pills and sent to bed. Was better on Friday but felt bad again on Sunday and sent back to sick bay, was given some more medicine and sent back to bed. By Tuesday my temperature was 104F so they started giving me fruit juice and pills into me to bring it down but it went to 106F so the doctor gave up and an ambulance took me to the Navy Yard Dispensary where the doctor probed around and took an X-ray and found pneumonia. They then put me back in the ambulance and took me to the Brooklyn naval hospital. From there I was sent to St. Albans hospital in St. Albans, N. Y. I don't know how long I will be here, but it is really good food, nice soft beds, sheets, good food etc. The only catch is that every three hours day and night a guy comes around with a hypodermic filled with penicillin, result majority of the time you spend lying in every other position but on your back.

May 22—Well here is the little patient again just having the time of his life at navy expense. I have just had my daily inspection by three doctors, there is a lieutenant commander and two lieutenants junior grades. They all come around again tomorrow. They usually give you a pretty good "pomp" over. It looks beautiful today, the sky is blue and the wind is blowing. I can see a few trees from where I am. I still don't know much about this place as they keep you in bed instead of letting you wander around. I don't see the ocean, but there are 100 wards with 40 to 50 beds in a ward. Then I guess they have a bunch of private rooms too. Last night some Red Cross girls came in the ward and played phonograph records for us, and yesterday some ladies came around distributing magazines, candy, and cigarettes. I am now watching the guy draw closer with my 120, clock penicillin shot (here it comes ouch).

On we have a pretty good group of nurses on here. Two of them are nice, but have to be an old witch from 3 p. m. to 11 p. m., but she usually gives us an evening of laughs when you combine the things she does with the way she does them. And the things some guys pipe up with is always good for a joke.

May 23—Tomorrow you will get the letter telling that I am sick, and you will start to worry, but there is nothing I can do about it. In about half an hour I will get my 25th shot of penicillin judging by commercial based that is about $75 worth, so think of the money you are saving.

May 24—They cleaned this place up this morning so I guess they will have inspection tomorrow morning, and in the afternoon we will have visitors. None for me however.

May 25—Pretty hot around here this afternoon, there are quite a few visitors around the ward. Did not get any place near church this morning as I am still a bed patient. Sometimes I get brave and take a walk around the ward but the walk usually ends with a nurse telling me to get back into bed.

May 29—This is really a rugged life, they woke me up at 9:30 a. m., when they managed my bed, then back to bed to finish waking up. This is the first place I have ever been where one is encouraged to sleep if they want to. In a few more minutes they will bring my dinner in to me. This being waited on is what I can't get used to. It seems such a long time since I was last waited on. The Red Cross came in and played records, again last night, we then listened to Flier McGee and the boys at 9:30 and Bob Hope at 10. We are three hours later back here, so it would keep Daddy up to hear some of his favorites, if he is here. Our meals are very good.
