TB Strikes Young Old, Rich, Poor

Of all the diseases which afflict man, tuberculosis takes the greatest toll of lives among young people between 15 and 35 years of age.

Tuberculosis is no respecter of persons—it strikes young and old, rich and poor. No race is immune to it. Wherever it strikes, it brings suffering. No one can say who suffers most from tuberculosis. It is always tragic for the individual to learn that he has the disease, and it is tragic for his family, whether he is young or whether he has passed the bloom of youth and is approaching middle age.

Certainly it is tragic for a young man or woman to begin a business career or about to be married to be stricken with tuberculosis. The years between 15 and 35 are the years of promise and the years which see the beginning of the fulfillment of the promises of youth.

While more people 40 years of age and over die from tuberculosis than young people, just as deaths are more numerous in the older age group, tuberculosis is the most deadly of all the diseases which attack young people from 15 to 35. Tuberculosis at that age is by no means a death sentence. It can be cured at any age. But the treatment for the disease means an interruption of normal activities for months.

The risk of catching tuberculosis would be greatly reduced if young people early formed good health habits and adhered to them throughout their lives.

Of course, the surest way of never getting tuberculosis is never to come in contact with tubercle bacilli, the germs which cause the disease. But we can never be sure we shall not come in contact with the disease—in fact, we can be certain we shall. We can arm ourselves in advance, however, so that when we meet the germs we are they the victors.

Young people should build up resistance to the disease by getting a good night's rest every
