

Labor Relations Topic at Meet

Education may be the only solution to the problems of industrial relations, asserted Richard B. Morris, Portland attorney specializing in labor relations, in speaking before the Hillsboro Rotary club Thursday. He said there must be a realization by all that laws passed by a majority are to be observed.

Morris was not optimistic as to the Taft-Hartley labor bill bringing industrial peace, pointing out that it was not a cure-all. The law, he said, provides that after August 23 no new union shop contracts may be entered into without a vote of the majority of employees in a firm. This may provoke difficulties about next March when the majority of the union shop contracts in Oregon expire, he said. The act attempts to solve the jurisdictional strike, which is so costly to business and the nation's economy. Corcoran is also outlawed, it was pointed out.

Most difficult thing facing business in recent years, according to Morris, has been the uncertainty brought about by the uncertain rulings of the wage and hour commission. Such uncertainties have been eliminated under the new act, but a host of others have been created to increase the problems of doing business, Morris said. The operation of a business is becoming more and more a political football, he contended.

Many employers without producing from unions have been fostering employee benefit plans, asserted Morris, and it has only been in recent years that the unions have been taking up such programs.

Frank Pile will be in charge of the program today. J. W. Payton on July 24 and Carl Huber on July 31. L. B. Ball was program chairman last Thursday.

Big Fire Razes Six Buildings

The fire was watched by thousands of spectators who lined the two-block long area engulfed in the flames.

Imperial Feed & Grain employs about 29 full-time employees throughout the year. Up to 55 are employed in the summer months during the harvest. Owners hope to keep all employees working for the company. President of the company is W. C. Theda of Tacoma.

Charles C. Rapp, Hillsboro, is vice-president and manager.

The organization was started in 1913 at the old Climax mill by C. B. Buchanan. The first section of the main building, a 50-foot by 120-foot warehouse, was built shortly afterwards. Sections added to the main structure include a 24 by 130-foot warehouse in 1937, an 80 by 100-foot section in 1939, a 30 by 150-foot section in 1943, and the 50 by 80-foot grain elevator in 1945. About 250,000 feet of lumber went into construction of the elevator.

The old Climax mill, originally a flour mill, was a county landmark for the past 73 years.

Just six weeks before the fire the Imperial company completed a two-year modernization program on the feed plant. It was never used as a complete unit. Further modernizations had been started just a week before the blaze.
