

Parent Problems

Don't Let Children Trespass On Other People's Property

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

YESTERDAY we dilated with enthusiasm over the companionship we parents might cultivate through enjoyment with our children, of the growing plants and trees and flowers and birds and lovely creatures all about us. We observed the values to parents and children, gained from taking hikes together by the streams and through the fields and woods. We also cautioned parents while strolling with their children to keep in mind the value of teaching these children to respect the ownership of the property over which they hike. Whether we and our children are tramping over public property such as a park or over fields and forests belonging to individual persons, this moral obligation to our children is very important. When one or both parents are strolling with one or more children, the setting is about ideal for good moral teaching by example and by precept, in respect to the rights and possessions of others.

Respect Rights

Easily then the child can be led to see that if the property over which he is hiking belongs to the public, he should respect the rights of all the other people of the public to whom that property belongs. Early, too, he can be led to see how he would feel toward anybody walking over his fields or woods, who would harm or destroy anything thereon. But let us parents always remember that when our children harm, destroy or carry away other people's possessions we not only do wrong to the owner of the property, but what is worse, we do harm to ourselves and our children inside—we do moral harm. On the other hand, when we always show in the presence of our children due regard for the rights and possession of other people, and reinforce our good example by well-chosen words, we build good moral stuff in ourselves and our children. Let us remember, too, that while material things may easily be restored or bought with money, good moral fiber isn't gotten this way. It has to grow for weeks and months and years, though in a moment it can be destroyed.

Think of all the families of our nation within easy walking distance from wide open spaces; of all other families who with the aid of common transportation or the family car might have access to such places.

But if you owned fields, woods, streams, lakes and the like on the outskirts of a village, town or city, you might feel exasperated at the amount of harm and destruction to your property by strollers over it—leaving gates open, breaking down fences, tramping down crops or marring trees, shrubs or other growing things. Adults are among the worst offenders and some of these adults are parents having their own children with them.

Begin as soon as your tot can toddle, to educate him in proper care of his own things and property about the home and neighborhood. This I discuss in detail in my bulletin, "Teaching Child Care of Property," (to be had in a stamped envelope sent me in care of this paper.)

When you go strolling over fields and woods with your child let him see and hear you ask permission of the owner. Let him practice with you at closing gates and avoiding to tramp on crops and the like. Practice with him the highest respect for the rights and possessions of other people.

Newlyweds Honor Guests at Seaside

A pair of Gaston newlyweds received a delayed expense-free honeymoon, courtesy of the City of Seaside, last week-end as a token of good faith after the couple had been turned away from the resort town three weeks before when they were unable to find lodgings after the wedding.

As a result, Norma and Wesley Delany were presented the honeymoon on the city in an effort to show them the coast wasn't as inhospitable as it appeared.

The bride suite at one of the Seaside motels was reserved and every effort was made by the city's chamber of commerce to insure the couple's comfort. All Seaside's facilities were placed at the Delany's disposal.

Transportation to and from the coast was provided by the Forest Grove chamber. They were welcomed in Seaside by Mayor Hawn and Chamber President Fred Wheatley.

Past Chiefs Meet.—Past Chiefs of Phoenicia temple will meet Thursday night, June 20, at the home of Mrs. D. S. Rutherford, with Mrs. Zola Morgan and Mrs. Gertrude Brown of Portland as assisting hostesses.

Preaches in Portland.—Henry Young was the guest preacher in the Clinton Kelley Memorial church in Portland last Sunday.

Home From College.—County students from various colleges along the coast have returned home for the summer vacations with the spring terms completed.

REV. CLARENCE FORSBERG has been re-assigned to the pulpit of Hillsboro Methodist church. It was announced from the Oregon conference of Methodist churches at Ashland last week-end.

Mrs. Pio Officer Of Oregon Pioneers

Mrs. Flora Pio, a Washington county pioneer now living in Portland, was elected first vice-president of the Oregon Pioneer association at its 77th annual convention in Portland last week. Charles T. Dickinson of Oswego, 95, was elected president, and Mrs. Sarah Keiter was elected second vice-president.

Mrs. Harriet McKay McKernan, 95, was crowned queen mother, the selection being made because she was the oldest pioneer woman present.

Rutherford Returns Home

D. S. Rutherford returned home Sunday from a two week's visit with his four brothers and families at Saguaw and Vassar, Michigan. While in the east he attended a double-header baseball game of the Cubs in Chicago.

Nephew and Niece Visit

Stopping on their return from California, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Butler of Lind, Wash., spent the week-end with their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Andre.

Catholic Daughters Hold Variety Show

A variety show for the benefit of St. Cecilia's of Beaverton building fund, proved an entertaining and financial success, according to the sponsoring Catholic Daughters of America who produced the affair June 2, in the Beaverton grade school auditorium.

Ray Mills, professional entertainer of Portland, acted as master of ceremonies, and sang several Irish numbers. His daughter Kathy danced in the ballet number and his 15-month-old son also appeared in a skit.

Pupils of Anita Pienovi dance studio presented several numbers. Miss Pienovi gave a ballet solo. St. Cecilia's school was represented by a group of boys and girls with several songs. A skit was given by the young people's club of St. Cecilia and members of the Old-Time dance group gave a demonstration of a square dance.

Patricia Siedler and Darlene Jarde played a piano duet. Patricia and Mrs. Balle accompanied all the numbers on the program.

The piece de resistance of the program was the bathing suit revue presented by the daughters. Old fashioned suits from 1890 to 1930 were displayed and appropriate music of the different eras were given. In this skit the Mills' baby appeared as "Miss 1949."

Attending Conference at Bar View

Miss Marjorie Aldinger is attending the annual session of the regional officers meet of the Wesley Fellowship of Oregon. The meeting is held this week at Bar View. Miss Aldinger is secretary for Willamette Wesley for the coming year and is also the representative for Willamette university at the conference.

Pythian Sisters Initiate

Initiation will be the order of business at the meeting Friday night of Phoenicia temple, Pythian Sisters, at the KP hall. A program is also being planned. This will probably be the last meeting of the temple until September.

In Jones Hospital

Mrs. Martha D. Mann is in Jones hospital receiving treatment for a heart attack. Her son-in-law, Lester C. Mooberry, is also in the hospital recovering from a major operation performed Monday. Both are improving.

Vacation at Beaches

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Colvin are spending the week at Oregon beaches. They will journey as far south as Depoe Bay before they return Saturday.
