

Easters End New England Trip

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Easter combined business and pleasure on an eight weeks' trip. On May 14 they left for Spokane, where they attended the Rotary club conference for Oregon and Washington.

From there they went to Boston by train, where Mr. Easter attended a national council meeting of the Boy Scouts. He is a member of the executive board of the Portland area.

After vacationing at Cape Cod and traveling through Quebec, Montreal, and New England, they drove to New York City where Mr. Easter attended the international Rotary club convention as a delegate from the local group.

They visited Philadelphia and then went to Washington, D. C., where they sat in on a session of congress. They saw Senator Wayne Morse and Representative Walter Verblad, and toured Mt. Vernon and the national monuments. After visiting Williamsburg, Va., they drove to Sullivan, Ind., to visit friends and relatives of Mrs. Easter. On the way back to Oregon, they passed through Denver, Colo., and Bend.

During the return trip from Boston, they logged more than 6000 miles, the entire trip covering nearly 10,000. According to Mrs. Easter, they encountered all kinds of weather, but found that Oregon looked good to them when they got back Wednesday.

The best way to appreciate the Tualatin valley and Oregon is to go on a trip, according to Easter, who said that it was too crowded in the east and that we have many more freedoms cut here. This is a wonderful country of ours and we should appreciate it, he said.

The Easters went by train to Boston, where their car had been driven by a scout executive from this area, and they made the rest of the trip by automobile.

Pedestrian Rights Outlined by Court

The principle that when a pedestrian starts across an intersection on the green light he is entitled to complete his crossing and has the right of way even though the light turns red before he gets across was upheld in an opinion in the federal court of Pennsylvania recently, according to the Oregon State Motor association.

Courts uniformly have held that the person on foot is entitled to the right of way under such conditions and the recent ruling emphasizes the fact that motorists should observe this principle, according to the association.

In its ruling, the court said: A pedestrian at an intersection has a superior right of way over vehicles when, after he has started across, the traffic light turns against him.

The fact that the courts uphold the pedestrian's rights at intersection is one more reason why motorists should accept their share of the responsibility for safety in traffic by crossing only at intersections.
