

Once-Upon-a-Time Operetta Given By 100 David Hill Pupils Friday

A two-act operetta entitled "The Frog Prince" was presented by pupils of David Hill school last Friday, with 10 taking part in the colorful production.

Playing the part of the frog that plops unexpectedly from a well was Jon Chantreau. He asked the little princess, portrayed by Delores Peterson, for permission to live in her palace, agreeing to return a golden ball she dropped in the well if his request was granted.

The estimated 300 persons in the audience saw the story-book character later in the form of a prince as he attended dinner at the palace in the presence of the king and queen, Richard Fraser and Sharon Conner.

The operetta, under the direction of Mrs. Carol Jamison, was the first one given in the new auditorium at David Hill. Mrs. Jamison is a music instructor at the grade school, and has taught there for a little over one year.

Some of the other pupils that took part in the musical program were David Foster, leader of the peasants; Juanita Dupree, gypsy fortune teller; Jimmie Wallace, butler to the king; Jeraldine Thompson, Judy McClain, Judy Inman, Joyce Phillips, Linda Watson, Carolyn Cornutt, Judy Carlson, Diane Peterson, Nancy Watts and Bonnie Thompson.

Clipper Hoop League Planned

A Clipper basketball league for players under 21 years of age is being organized for this area by interested adults, according to Pete Shelley of Orenco. He said it is hoped that league play will start early in January on a home-and-home basis.

North Plains, West Union, Explorer Scouts, C. Y. O. and Orenco have already indicated interest. Any other groups interested should contact Shelley. Any team without a gym to play its home games can make arrangements to play at Orenco.

Players of the Hillsboro adult league will officiate the Clipper games without cost. Contracts are to be signed as a protection to the school district.

Farm Outlook . . .

Standardized Practices Uncommon

Large farms have been able to show profits in good times and bad. This is the rule. There are exceptions. Why? In the face of paying out wages and high tax rates these large farms, often operated by absentee farmers, show a profit while many small operators, with their eye close to what's going on, show a loss.

The small farm is usually undercapitalized. The farmer tries to make his operations big enough to be a practical unit. In this effort he fails to cover the ground thoroughly—crops and livestock are neglected, irrigation is delayed. Many large farms wade through periods of trouble because the "angel" in the city is bringing in funds to make things roll. This goes on for longer periods than the full-time farmer can endure.

Are there other reasons why big farms live through tough times while small ones provide nothing except a chance to live off a living for the hard-working fellow?

Tom Hilson, Barn-equipment Sales Manager for R. M. Wade & Co. points out that there is no practical dairy barn equipment that will meet the needs of a number of farmers. Each job must be fashioned to suit the likes and dislikes of the individual farmer. Tom is talking only about equipment. He says every effort to standardize equipment has met with little response among farmers. Aim of manufacturers now is to standardize parts of equipment and assemble them to suit the individual. Also he points out that dairymen have been the most consistent buyers of farm equipment in his 25 years of service among them.

Equipment is patterned to fit methods. The tools cannot be standard for farmers A, B and C unless they use the same methods. Hundreds of millions are being spent by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the 48 state departments. Add to that the good efforts of schools of agriculture. Why have methods not been standardized so that equipment can be made on an assembly line basis?

The answer will naturally be to look about us and see what other lines of work use standardized equipment. Most of them are in the same fix as the farmers. A druggist, a grocer and other merchants usually have their fixtures cut to order. But gasoline service stations are quite standard. There are many devices and tools at your service station that are duplicated in dozens of each business district. It makes for economy in manufacture and sales. It makes for public respect and credit too.

If we analyze this further we will note that the farmer is a rugged individualist. He wants no one to tell him how to do it, though he often knows he could learn and profit by following good examples. It is this ruggedness that has been out of the America which today is the most dependable bread basket of the world.

Farmers rebel against regimentation, even though it means better farming and better business for them as individuals. When is this independence a handicap? Where does it become a handicap? There is no simple formula.

A worse handicap than his own rigid ideas on how things should be done is the constant flux of demand upon the farmer. This year the world wants this, next year it wants that. In the field of milk production it appears on the surface that demand is most consistent. United States uses more milk per person than any country in the world. But the demands of city, state, and federal inspectors change with the wind.

Leaders of Cub Pack 511 Named

Leaders of Cub pack 511 were elected last week, with L. E. Cate as the leader of the 38-boy group for the coming year. Carl Bailey was named assistant scoutmaster; Keith Sushauer, committee chairman, and Lawrence Chamberlain, secretary-treasurer.

Packs 511 and 521 are entering the second week of their aluminum drive. They are requesting outdated auto tags and other old aluminum from Hillsboro residents. Money will be used for financing handicraft work and other projects. Containers for the scrap aluminum have been placed in local garages and service stations by Cub fathers and committees.

Young Newsmen Publish Paper

Neophyte North Plains newsmen are cutting their journalistic teeth on the Golden Nugget, written and published by pupils of North Plains grade school.

The sharp-eyed reporters and feature writers have covered almost every phase of school activity from the piano tuner's visit to the need for a gym shower room in the 6-page Christmas number. Pages are brightened by illustrations of Sterling Nelson, staff cartoonist.

Features on the duplicator which prints the paper, new books in the library and Boy Scouts mingle with straight news stories on school drives, class meetings and hobby work in the well-planned paper. There is even an 11-year-old "Interesting Personality" described.

No padding out with old jokes or "ideal pupils" mars the news-filled Nugget. Though spelling is occasionally original, some of the articles would be a credit to a high school paper.

The masthead lists David Troutman as editor-in-chief; Eldon Ewing, news editor; Sterling Nelson, sports editor; John Hartock, junior editor; and Sterling Nelson, cartoonist. The male society editor is Raymond Jones. Only woman on the staff is Mrs. Evan Parry, typist. J. A. Jaross is advisor to the junior journalists.
