SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1869.

The Lone Fish-Ball.

The following cheerful melody is to be sung without lining. The "moral" will suggest itself to every singer!

There was a man Went up and down To seek a dinner through the town.

Chorus—There was a man Went up and down To seek a dinner through the town.

What wretch is he That wife forsakes Who best of jams and waffles makes?

Chorus—What wretch is he That wife forsakes Who best of jams and waffles makes?

He counts his cash, To know his pence, And finds he has but just six cents.

Chorus—He counts his cash, To know his pence, And finds he has but just six cents.

He finds at last A right cheap place, And enters in with modest face.

Chorus—He finds at last A right cheap place, And enters in with modest face.

The bill of fare He searches through, To see what his six cents will do.

Chorus—The bill of fare He searches through, To see what his six cents will do.

The cheapest viand Of them all Is twelve-an-a-half cents for two fish-ball.

Chorus—The cheapest viand Of them all Is twelve-an-a-half cents for two fish-ball.

The waiter he To him doth call, And gently whispers, One fish-ball.

Chorus—The waiter he To him doth call, And gently whispers, One fish-ball.

The waiter roars It through the hall; The guests they start at one fish-ball!

Chorus—The waiter roars It through the hall; The guests they start at one fish-ball!

The guest then says (Quite ill at ease), A piece of bread, sir, if you please.

Chorus—The guest then says (Quite ill at ease), A piece of bread, sir, if you please.

The waiter roars It through the hall— We don't give bread with ONE fish-ball!

Chorus—The waiter roars It through the hall— We don't give bread with ONE fish-ball!

MORAL. Who would have bread With one fish-ball, Must get it first or not at all.

Chorus—Who would have bread With one fish-ball, Must get it first or not at all.

Who would fish-ball With fixins eat, Must get some friend to stand a treat.

Chorus—Who would fish-ball With fixins eat, Must get some friend to stand a treat.

DOES IT PAY TO MAKE A RAG CARPET.—Jennie F. Hazen, in the Western Rural, says no, and specifies as follows:

In the first place, if you reckon your time as worth anything, it don't pay.

In the second place, if you cut, or tear up garments which might be worn longer as they are, or cut over for some other purpose, it don't pay.

If you buy new cloth, red or green—as I have known women to do—it don't pay.

If you devote all your time to it, to the utter exclusion of other duties, it don't pay.

If you hire it woven and pay fifteen cents per yard, it don't pay.

If you weave it yourself, up-stairs in a cold room, or in the wood house, and take a cold which may terminate in something very serious, if not fatal, it don't pay.

If you buy your dye stuffs at the present prices, it don't pay.

If you can do any other kind of work, and earn a carpet, it don't pay.

If it is made for the "other room," and is to be kept immaculate from the tread of profane feet, except on company days, it don't pay.

If it involves the sitting up of half the night, when nature demands repose, it don't pay.

If it makes you nervous and cross, and you scold your husband and spank the children, it don't pay.

To LABEL TREES.—A distinguished horticulturist learned by chance that the best way to label a tree is to write with a lead pencil on zinc. The name cannot be erased at first, and it grows more distinct and durable with age.

A rubber manufactory is to be established at San Francisco.

AGRICULTURAL.

ANIMAL FOOD.

We may argue as much as we please against the use of pork, it will continue to be the favorite animal food with all persons who perform much hard, out-door work, especially in our cold winters.

One pound of fat is equivalent, as a heat producer, to two and a half pounds of starch or sugar, and so far as this is the object of eating animal food, good firm pork is the cheapest meat that we can use.

But a farmer who uses his brain as well as his muscle needs something more than fat pork. For what sin is he who raises denied the use of beef, or mutton, or poultry? In the summer, without an ice house, it is difficult to keep fresh meat. Not so in the winter.

But if it were true, it would only prove that you do not work as hard or as intelligently as a farmer should. If you spend two or three hours these short days talking at the Corners, it is perhaps true that you cannot afford to eat beef. You do not deserve salt pork. Two hours work will pay for a good breakfast, and that, properly cooked, will enable you to work harder, and think as well as work—and it is thoughtful work that tells. At any rate a farmer can have mutton when a pretty good sheep can be bought for $1 75, and the pelt worth half the money.

When thousands of sheep are boiled down for tallow, and the rest fed to swine, the farmer who sells them might, one would think, afford to eat a little mutton occasionally, and the children, instead of rye coffee, might have a basin of soup for breakfast that would send them on the run to school these zero mornings puffing and blowing off steam like a locomotive.—[Harris in Am. Agriculturist.

ACCOUNTS WITH THE FARM.

There is no farmer who has tried the practice of keeping accurate accounts with his farm, who has not been benefited thereby. By carefully entering in the account book every item of income and expenditure, the farmer not only enables himself to see, at all times, his financial condition, but the practice fosters an economy and regularity which must necessarily be attended with the happiest results.

Few men would make engagements if they knew at the time they would be unable to meet them but keeping no account, as is the general rule with farmers—they have no accurate idea of their income and expenditure, and in their natural hopefulness, they contract engagements beyond their income, and the result is disappointment to the creditor and disaster to the farmer.

In view of the obvious advantages of the practice, we earnestly urge every farmer to provide himself with a well-bound book, and commence to carefully and accurately enter every item of receipt and expenditure connected with his farm operations, striking a balance at the end of each year. In connection with this farm account, should be kept a journal of the farm, in which should be noted every event of the farm, such as the commencement of plowing, the time of planting, cultivating and harvesting the several crops; the time of planting trees with their varieties, etc., a journal of the stock not being neglected. Give the practice a fair trial, and you will never abandon it.—[Southern Ruralist.

DIFFERENCE IN EGGS.

Though most farmers keep fowls, and raise their own eggs, there are many who have not learned the difference there is in the richness and flavor of eggs produced by well-fed hens, and those from birds that have been half-starved through our winters. There will be some difference in the size, but far more in the quality. The yolk of one will be large, fine colored, and of good substance, and the albumen or white clear and pure; while the contents of the other will be watery and meagre, for lack in the parent fowl to carry out and complete the work nature had sketched. In order therefore to have good eggs the fowls should be well fed and, also provided during the months they are unable to come to the ground with a box containing an abundance of fine gravel that they may be able to grind and prepare their food for digestion. Of eggs, those from the domestic hen are decidedly the best; but those of ducks and geese may be used for some of the purposes of domestic cookery.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Chicken baked in Rice.—Cut a chicken into joints as for a fricassee, season it with pepper and salt lay it into a pudding dish lined with slices of ham or pork add a pint of real gravy and an onion finely minced fill up the dish with boiled rice well pressed and piled as high as the dish will hold, and cover it with a paste of flour and water; bake it one hour, and serve before taking off the paste.

Icing for Cakes.—Beat the whites of four eggs to a solid froth, add gradually three-quarters of a pound of refined sugar pounded and sifted; mix in the juice of half a lemon; beat it till very light and white. The cake should be cold. Place it before the fire, pour over it the icing, and smooth over the top and sides with a knife. It might be set to dry at the mouth of a cool oven.

LEMON CAKES.—Rub half a pound of butter into one pound of flour and a pound of powdered lump sugar, the rind and juice of one lemon, three eggs, leaving out the whites unless the butter be very hard. Mix all together, and drop on tins in small cakes.

Cornstarch Cake.—Half a pound of sugar, four ounces of butter, five eggs, one teaspoonful cream of tartar, half a teaspoonful of soda, half a pound of cornstarch, half a gill of sweet milk.

Sugar Cake.—Three pints of flour a tablespoonful of butter, half a pound of sugar, one egg, half a teaspoonful of soda, a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, milk enough to make a dough, roll it thin and cut it in squares.

VARIOUS ITEMS.

The basest men have the lowest estimate of women.

When is a foot like a stable? When there's a corn-bin in it.

The faster a man starts in life the sooner he gets into a hobble.

Stocks are firm, as the thief said when he had his feet in them.

A young lady once blew her lover out of doors and then kissed the candle.

Why is a patch of corn like a dunce? Because it is always liable to have its ears pulled.

A little boy at a Sunday School being asked, "What is the chief end of man?" replied, "The end what's got the head on."

Here are some famous curiosities: The eye of the mind. Horn of a buck-ent.

The gun used in the war of the elements.

A link of chain lightning. Snow gathered in the "winter of our discontent."

Tears from the eye of a needle. A corn from the foot of a mountain.

A mosquito's bill receipted. A spoke from the wheel of the chariot of the sun.

Hair from the head of navigation. Fruit from an axle tree.

A pair of bellows from an ox. A frame of mind.

Blankets from an oyster bed. Key to fit a lock of hair.

A bellows to blow noses. A skiff to cross the river of life.

Some tobacco from the pipe of a steamboat.
