SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1869.

A MURDEROUS SEA FLOWER.—One of the exquisite wonders of the sea is called the opellet, and is about as large as the German aster, looking indeed very much like one. Imagine a very large double aster, with ever so many long petals of a light green, glossy as satin, and each one tipped with rose color.

These lovely petals do not lie quietly in their places, like those of the aster in your garden, but wave about in the water, while the opellet generally clings to a rock. How innocent and lovely it looks on its rocky bed. Who would suspect that it could eat anything grosser than dew or sunlight? But those beautiful, waving arms, as you call them, have another use besides looking pretty. They have to provide for a large, open mouth, hidden deep down among them—so well hidden that one can scarcely find it. Well do they perform their duty, for the instant a foolish little fishlet touches one of the rosy tips, he is struck with lightning. He immediately becomes numb, and in a moment stops struggling, and then the other beautiful arms wrap themselves around him, and he is drawn into the huge, greedy mouth and is seen no more. Then the lovely arms unclose and wave again in the water, looking as innocent and harmless as though they had never touched a fish.

JENKINS OUTDONE.—At a recent

grand hop, in Addison, there was a great array of belles and dry goods. The following is a description of the costumes:

The beautiful Miss B— was dressed in a pair of high-heeled gaiters, lined with cloth, and fastened with strings; she wore a beautiful suit of fair which she had borrowed from her sister, who did not participate. The magnificent Mrs. W— wore short sleeves and a splendid low neck, with checkered stockings, tied with a beautiful pair of elkskins, which she had received in the shape of a legacy from the late Mrs. Fish. Miss P— was dressed in a water-d silk, with a large waterfall, reminding one forcibly of what Dr. Crane terms fungus hemetodes. Miss K— seemed the belle of the evening; she wore a pink scarf, tied behind her ear with the end falling gracefully to the floor, and looped skirt made of the star spangled banner, with stripes and stars on one side, and stars and stripes on the other. All were disappointed that this ambrosial flower could not remain during the entire evening. Miss G—, from Duck Lake, entertained a large circle of friends by her sparkling wit, which robbed her diamonds of half their brilliancy; she wore a No. 7 shoe, run over at the heel, and newly greased. Miss E—, of Skimerville, wore a walking skirt with an invisible waist; in her hair she wore a red, red rose; she was like old sherry, pale and very delicate—had trimmed her nails before leaving home, and neglecting to put on gloves, had taken a severe cold. Want of space forbids our continuing this notice.

"GRAVE" BUSINESS.—One of the
