N Wisconsin, many years ago, lived one M Pearson, a young man of great enterprise and gaetty, and a remarkable judge of Groceries, in which commodity he was, perhaps, the fairest dealer in the State. He has done business everywhere, from Wisconsin to Oregon. Fast young men and the oldest connoisseur would use nothing but M. Pearson's cigars and tobacco. Gold hunt-ers in Idaho would buy their groceries from him. The old ladies in Oregon would always bring their truck and trade with him, and the children would never go to sleep until guaranteed a full supply of his candy. This same (young man) M.
