

How Jeff Davis Went Out to Cowhide a Wisconsin Boy and How He Didn't Do It.

[From the Milwaukee Sentinel, Nov. 5.] It is probably known to but very few of the present citizens of our State that Wisconsin has the high distinction of having given Mr. Jefferson Davis, ex-President of the ex-Confederate States, his first public whipping.

It should be remembered that Master Jeff. was educated for the army at the expense of the Government he so ungratefully betrayed, and entered the service as a lean, lank, overbearing Lieutenant, and was stationed at Fort Howard and Fort Winnebago about the years 1829 to 1831. In 1830 or 1831 he was stationed at the latter post, where the circumstances were about to relate occurred.

For a year or two previous a Buck-eye boy named Stewart—a full-sized, well-built, muscular man, as good-natured as an elephant—had been in the employ of Judge Arndt, of Green Bay, in building what were called Mackinac boats, with which most of the river transportation was done. At the time we speak of, Stewart was engaged in mechanical works at Fort Winnebago, where Davis was stationed.

Jeff, in the meantime, had become enamored of a pretty young woman, of semi-aboriginal origin, or in plain English, a half-breed, and was very jealous of any attentions bestowed upon her by others. From some cause or other the monster within him fixed his green eyes upon Stewart, and he swore by all the buttons on his coat that he would cowhide the miserable Yankee out of his skin. The idea of such a miserable wretch of skin and bones attacking such a built man as Stewart was preposterous enough, and his threats were regarded as mere Southern gasconade. But Jeff, evidently calculated, as he did on a later occasion, that the low-born plebeian would never dare to resist a high-born Southerner, but would crouch and take all he might see fit to lay on, and so, providing himself with a good cow-hide, he watched his opportunity.

The desired occasion was not long delayed. One evening, after the day's work was ended, as Stewart was walking in front of the fort, Davis came out and without ceremony began to lay it on. But he found, as he did in the rebellion, that there were two parties to the controversy. A blow or two was sufficient to arouse the lion, and Stewart, as he turned upon him, planted his left digits under Jeff's right ribs, and his right one under his left ear, and knocked him end over end. Stewart was not a professional pugilist, and did not wait for his adversary to rise, but pounced upon him like a tiger, and laying Jeff's wrists side by side on his chest, held them both as in a vice with his left hand, and kept his right hand ready for further action. Poor Davis, half dead from the two sledge-hammer blows he had received, squirmed and twisted in vain. There he was, fast as though he had been in the iron arms of a guillotine, and at the mercy of his adversary. By this time Stewart had become quite cool, and told Davis he deserved a good pounding; "but," said he, "if you will take back what you have said about me, and agree to let me alone, I will let you up without further injury."

No, he would never do any such thing. Then Stewart began to slap Jeff's face first on this side and then on the other, then repeated his demand for the pledge, and Jeff again refused. Then he pulled his nose and twisted it, and slapped his face some more. In the meantime the garrison was all astir, and General, then Major, Twigg, the same that went over to the rebellion with his whole command of United States troops stationed in Texas, a giant of a man physically, standing about six feet six, and of full proportions, but a confessed cowardly wretch, came out and peremptorily ordered Stewart to let Davis up, an order which, as commander of the fort, he could have executed summarily if he had the pluck to do it. Stewart replied that he would not let him up an inch till he apologized and promised to keep the peace, and said he, "Major, you can't make me do it; and if you want to take a hand in this fight, just try it on, and I will whip you and your whole garrison if you will bring out your men in squads of not more than six at a time." And then he went on manipulating Jeff's cheeks and nose and ears and repeating his demands for "innocence for the past and security for the future," while Twigg looked on in the astonishment at the audacious pluck of the Yankee boat-builder. Jeff, seeing no way to escape, either by bluster, main strength, or the interference of the Major, concluded to accept the situation, took a back and promised to treat Stewart as a gentleman, and was let up, remarking, as he went away, that he never received such blows from man or horse; and probably he never did again, till another Buck-eye boy met him in another wilderness. He said he felt as if he had been kicked by a mule. Jeff should have remembered that lesson, and never again presumed, as he did in getting up the rebellion, upon a Yankee's holding still to be kicked.

The writer of this article did not witness this interesting fight, but was well acquainted with Stewart, and received the foregoing account of the affair from his own mouth soon after the occurrence, as well as from the lips of others who witnessed it; and the narrative we have given may be relied upon as substantially correct.

If I were to come to your house by chance, and you were at work in your kitchen, I should hope that you would be ladies and gentlemen enough not to apologize. I always have a poor opinion of people who, when I catch them at work in the kitchen, are agitated, and say, "I beg your pardon. If I had known you were coming I would not have been found here." That is where you ought to be; and you need not be ashamed, nor apologize. It is for you, rather than against you.—H. W. Beecher.

The Ohio Enterprise of the 4th inst. says that a distance of sixteen miles from Marysville, on the line of the California and Oregon road, has been graded, the bridge completed over Feather river and passed over, and a force is now at work two miles below Dry Creek; only twenty-three miles from Dry Creek.

A FEARFUL INVENTION.—The Vallo Chronicle of the 30th ult., gives the following account of the invention of a young man of that city:

Thomas Hill, Esq., a young mechanic of this place, has constructed models of two inventions which he proposes to patent. He has constructed a hollow steam ram for perforating ironclads or other vessels in time of war. It punches a hole in the sides of a vessel under water sixteen inches in diameter, is immediately withdrawn, and a shell or torpedo can then be fired through the hollow cylinder. The utter destruction of an opposing vessel is insured. The machinery works by steam, and the ram is designed to be driven out sixteen feet with a striking force equal to 3,000 tons, when after penetrating the vessel, it will be immediately withdrawn. A vessel completely honeycombed below the water line so full of holes that it would be impossible to prevent sinking. A careful examination of the model assures us that it will accomplish the purposes sought for, if such a destructive weapon of war should ever be built. It is intended to be fitted into an iron-clad, double screw propeller of peculiar model. This gentleman has also invented a double-action oscillating steam engine, the cylinders of which have a reciprocating motion that counteracts all dead points. The valve-gearing is very simple in operation, and the whole arrangement of parts is nicely adjusted to save space without loss of power. The engines are adapted particularly for a double-screw vessel. Mechanics and steam engineers who have examined the model approve of its mechanism, and believe for the purposes designed that it will supersede all other styles of engines.

ABOUT RATS.—The Central City (Colorado) Register contains the following: One of the most remarkable animals of the Rocky Mountains is the Rocky Mountain rat, the Neotoma Cincerea of Beard, also known as the Neotoma Occidentalis, and called in Oregon the wood rat. A full grown rat is often nine inches in length from tip of nose to base of tail, while the tail adds about as much more to its length. Its hair is soft, gray on the back and white on the belly, ears short but broad, and round tail, bushy at the tip. It is the worst thief in the animal creation, not excepting man, for it always steals, and does not stop to consider whether what he steals is valuable or not. Many strange stories are told concerning its stealing habits, candles, &c., and bringing back in return manure and all sorts of offal. Its operations often have the appearance more of having been the result of a desire to be employed than anything else. On one occasion, J. Alden Smith, of this office, says he had standing in his office in Clear Creek county half a keg of nails, containing three sizes, and during a single night these rats took out all the nails and piled them up on the floor in three piles, each size by themselves. The same animals night after night, brought in heaps of manure from an out-house.

But even a stranger trick was performed in the house of Mr. Hale on Tuesday night. On going to bed he placed his teeth on the bureau in the morning the teeth were gone, and a raw potato left in their place. After a long search, tearing off the weather-boarding in several places, they were found in the nest of one of these rats. The rat had started to carry off the potato but finding the teeth took them and left the potato. From letters found on the body of John Barber, a wood-chopper, murdered at Eureka, Mo., a few days ago, it appears that he was, with one brother and his mother, heir to an estate, in Bombay, valued at $1,000,000. The letter had just been received, and was still unopened.

The naval paymaster who drew $20,000 from the fund appropriated for marine barracks on the Pacific Coast, has failed to build the barracks, or make any account of the money. The marines will therefore be compelled to wait another appropriation before the barracks can be constructed. The marines accounts show a deficit of $1,000,000.

TIS SMOKE, CHEW, SMOKE!—He sits in a corner from morning to night, smoke, chew smoke! He sits in his pipe to light, goes puffing and chewing with all his might, till the hour of sleep. 'Tis his delight to smoke, chew, smoke. The quid goes in when the pipe goes out; 'tis chew, chew, smoke. He sits all day in a smoke of fog; 'tis puff, puff, puff. He growls at his wife, the cat and dog, he covers with filth the carpet and rug; and his only answer when I give him a jog, is puff, puff, puff. The house all over from end to end, is smoke, smoke, smoke. In whatever room my way I wend if I take his clothes to patch and mend, ungrateful perfumes will ever ascend of smoke, smoke, smoke. At home or abroad, afar or near, 'tis smoke, chew, smoke; his mouth is stuffed from ear to ear, or puffing the stamp of a pipe so dear; and his day will end I verily fear, in smoke, smoke, smoke.

Accounts are given in some of the foreign journals of the healing properties of a new oil. It is easily made from the yolks of eggs, and it is said to be much employed by the German colonists of South Russia as a means of curing cuts, bruises, scratches, etc. The eggs are boiled hard, the yolks removed and crushed and then placed over the fire and stirred carefully until the whole substance is on the point of catching fire, when the oil separates and may be poured off. Hen's eggs are considered best, and nearly two teaspoonfuls of oil may be gained from a single yolk.

GOLDEN GOOSE.—The Sacramento Bee has the following: There has been submitted to our inspection the contents of the gizzard of a goose slaughtered in Folsom for the purpose of furnishing a Thanksgiving dinner. Among the grit of gravel and cracked quartz were several specimens of gold, worth, in the aggregate, at least eight dollars.

"Why do you wink at me, sir?" said a beautiful young lady, angrily, to a stranger, at a party, an evening or two since. "I beg your pardon, madam," replied the wit. "I winked as men do when looking at the sun; your splendor dazzled my eyes."

Over 10,000 Persons TESTIFY to the wonderful cures of Dr. J. W. Murray's Balm for the Liver and Blood, Nature's own remedy. One of the celebrated physicians of Portland says he is cured of the Lung and Liver complaint, and says he owes his life to Dr. Murray's Lung and Liver Balm. Read what he says: PORTLAND, May 21, 1869. I have tried Dr. J. W. Murray's Lung and Liver Balm. I used it in my family with the best success. I was sick for some months and used every remedy. I called in several physicians, but they did me no good. I exhausted every remedy known to the medical profession, and received no benefit. This Lung and Liver Balm cured me, and I do not hesitate to recommend it to the public as a good and safe remedy to the public and my friends. It is good, and those who know me, as many do in this State, as I have lived in many parts of it, know that I would not recommend them to use a thing that had no merit, because I am opposed to quack remedies. The Hon. Jno. E. Sanford, Insurance Commissioner of Massachusetts, in his Report for 1868, speaking of Dividends in Life Insurance Companies, says, "The sooner such guarantees cease to be made, and such expectations created, the sooner Life Insurance will come to rest on its true motive, and men insure their lives for security, and not for dividends. The best and the most popular companies will then be those that promise only equity, and render all that they promise, and furnish the best security, with the most up right and judicious management."

By the Stock plan the full cash effect of the premium is immediately secured to the insured, the company taking all the risk. By the Mutual plan, the full value in insurance of the premium paid, is not secured to the policy-holder, who takes a portion of the risk himself.

"GAY" NEWS. Farmers Can Ride and Plow, by SECURING ONE OF THE "GAY" PLOWS, Manufactured and sold for the very low price of $65 and $75. THE simplicity and practicability of this new Plow commends it favorably to the special notice of every farmer. It possesses a decided superiority over all other plows now in use. The wheels are four feet in diameter, and run on the unplowed land. Its entire construction is in no way complicated. The plow is managed in every manner with ease, and requires only two levers to be used in making any alteration. The superiority of the "Gay" Plow will be clearly shown by the following certificate:

We, the undersigned, citizens of Linn county, Oregon, having purchased and used upon our farms the "Gay" Plow, hereby certify that the same has given us entire satisfaction. Its facility for adjusting to suit the depth of furrow without moving from the seat is simple and easy. We like the plow for its draft, because the same is brought to bear directly upon the plow-beam instead of the carriage; also, because it is strong and durable, all except the wood-work being constructed of wrought iron—no castings are used. The wheels running upon the solid land in every variety of soil, give the plow, in striking off land and in plowing, not having to make the necessary changes in the machinery, and the seat is always level, and the wing the driver forward or sideways as in other plows. Better work and more of it can be accomplished by the use of this Plow than by hand. We take pleasure in recommending the "Gay" Plow to our brother farmers, as one having no superior in Oregon. J. G.
