A Day as a New York Hack-Man. "Heigho, McGreer! what in the world are you swearing about so furiously?" I asked, entering the livery stable of the above named person, amid a volly of oaths that might have shocked his Satan-

"Oh! Good-morning," replied the man; excuse me, Mr. Morris. I was talking rather too strong, perhaps; but the fact is, I am in a desparate strait. You see Mr. Elmore's horses are both sick, and he has sent for me to let him have my best span and coach immediately. Well, the dapples are the best, and, to my eye, better than his own, but there's not a man belonging to the stables dare drive them but Cary, and he is down with a fever. The other horses are all out, or engaged, and I dont know what the

"There! there!" said I " no oaths, have nothing on hand, and really should like to play hack-man for a day!"
"Surely, Mr. Morris, you are joking!" ejaculated the man, in amazement.

"No! I am in earnest," for the idea was so novel that I, a lover of adventure, became every moment more determined to try it. "I am really in earnest, Mr. McGreer, so say no more about it. You know I can manage anything. Just have them hitched up, and give me the livery coat and hat. Now, leave me the office for a moment-but stop! don't let the men know who I am, and by the way-I almost forgot it-have our team sent around in about an hour."

Left alone, I proceeded to alter my appearance as much as possible, assuming the habilaments of a driver. I made a first rate Irishman of the higher grade. The metamorphose was scarcely completed, when Mr. McGreer entered. " Mr. Mor-'

"Michael, ye mane," I interrupted. Sure there is no reason I should be chested out of me name." We both laughed, and I received congratulations upon making so good a son of Erin. Stepping out of the office, I mounted the box, gathered up the reins, and was off. The horses were usually gay, but I had them in good trim by the time I stopped before Mr. Elmore's residence. It may be well to state, Grace Elmore was not the least inducement for my assuming my present position. All winter she had been a dream idol of mine, or, rather, half a one, for I could not really decide which I prefered, Grace, or Maud de Merris, a young French lady, who was spending the winter in New York with her parents. Both were bewitching, and I embraced every opportunity of being pringing from the box, I rang the bell, and presently assisted Miss Elmore and two friends into the carriage. The day was warm for March, and the four windows were open-Grace sitting on the seat nearest me.

"Round the pleasantest streets, driver. Anywhere for a ride," she said. We started, and for a quarter of an hour, the ladies' chit-chat was of no account to me, then suddenly Miss Fanny exclamed : " By the way, Grace, rumor says you are engaged to George Morris, and the 'solitaire' on your fore finger appears to confirm it." "Rumor honors me," was the reply: "Now, Grace," chimed in the third lady, "stop your nonsense, and tell us candidly, are you engaged?"

" Well, I am arraigned before a court for some terrible crime, and commanded to answer Guilty or Not Guilty ?- is that it?" was the half-laughing, half-annoyed at all, only urged to gratify friendly curi-

"Well, the truth is, I am not at liberty to say all I wish; but this much I will acknowledge—the ring you mention did once belong to George Morris!"

Was there ever such an abominable falsehood told, every word of which is suppose we are engaged, and there is the ring to prove it-a ring she took from me in sport, a few evenings since, and which I intended to recover upon our left." The next morning I saw in the next meeting. Well there was one thing Herald a notice which read as follows: lieving our representation, even at the certain. Grace Elmore will never be my wife; I could not trust such a schemer. This resolution was strengthened when I heard her say, in a confidential undertone, to the third lady (Miss Fanny having been left at her own house:) "I have, of course, no feeling in the matter, only school-girl's love; but I think George will make a desirable husband, while his wealth, with my own, will place us above any change of fortune. Then he is really very handsome, and I have decided to take him, I don't know that I could do much better.

"Pity I have not arrived at a similar decision," was my mental sarcasm. Just then she called, affectionately, "Mr. Lancy, I am George Morris."
"Home, driver." Willingly did I place Will you give me a private interview?" her on the carriage steps and turned toward the stables. "By Jove! I wish I

THE OHIO WOMEN-THEY DO NOT WANT TO VOTE.-The women of Ohio will yet make themselves heard on the question of suffrage.
