

Northern Pacific Railroad.

Ex-Governor Goodwin, of Arizona, has official information from one of the Vice Presidents of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company that a committee will soon be at Puget Sound to fix the western terminus of that road; and that orders have been given to build twenty-five miles of the road at once and eighty as soon as possible. The country from Puget Sound to the Cascade mountains is heavily timbered, but presents no obstacles to rapid grading. The distance from the Sound to Dallas is about 250 miles. The main difficulty will be encountered in the mountains, and about eighty miles will carry the railway to the first elevations. If the Northern Company organize labor forces and build as rapidly as the Central did, they ought by 1873 to have the whole line completed from the Sound to Lake Superior. On the lake end of the route the work is progressing very rapidly, and next summer is likely to see not less than six or seven hundred miles completed. The country from Lake Superior to the Rocky mountains is represented as of average agricultural value with Minnesota or Wisconsin, nearly all the way, and as the rails are laid down and the engines moved forward, thousands of farmers will crowd along the road on either side for miles. Thus there will have been organized a local traffic profitable to the company before the thorough business begins. Meanwhile the new emporium for the Asiatic and American coast trade on Puget Sound will catch a rush of adventurers and speculators in that direction, and our northern neighbors are promised a very lively time of it from next summer onward. Time and experience can only determine which of the two routes is to secure the greater amount of the trade from Asia. San Francisco has the start, which is a great advantage, but we apprehend that in the long run that road will do most of the business which carries the cheapest. We have no natural advantage over Puget Sound in the ocean trade. Their harbor is as good as ours. They have coal and exhaustless timber, with fish, lumber, and good lands east of the mountains, and when a few years shall have given them their share of steamship lines, the carrying trade across the continent will go to that road which does it the cheapest and quickest.—Sac. Union.

A Letter of Greeley's Spelled Out.

The Cincinnati Times gets off this good thing on one of Horace Greeley's autograph letters, sent in response to an invitation to attend the National Capital Convention in that city. The editor says: We have been shown an autograph letter from Horace Greeley to L. U. Reavis, Esq., of St. Louis, who is the head and front of the movement. Mr. Greeley having written this letter (in response to an invitation to be present at the Convention) with his own fair hand, it is rather difficult to decipher it. After two or three hours' intense study over the letter we made out that he wasn't coming, but we are not quite certain regarding his sentiments on the question of removing the capital. As near as we can gather, however, from his hieroglyphics, he "bases his batter of the 10th resisting the codfish cucumbers of Cincinnati at 25 cents a pound."

"It is not possible," continues Horace, "that I should ever stoop to come again. As putting in a request to come sections, the very gayest conveyances of our cemeteries are untrue and our preservers bankrupt. Swill your finest caterpillars in Washington, until it swims in an unfortunate location. All the McCarty's are sure to be veneered unless they accept moral polecats. I fought four of the earliest, and I suffered four fully undefinable cross cut saws."

"Who bought all the nuts and lozengers of Eucumbia Council? The bearer of the Federal percentage is the bearer of his own two-horse lumber wagon. It squealed when surrounded by a dose of Widow Cliquot. Experimented on by the population of repeating tortois in myriads to the defeat of nautical anchorites and tomatoes. It swelled to a forest of artichokes, and amid the solitude of rosie barrels thus inviting the Bois de Boulogne, and accompanying the formations of these factories throughout the civilized world."

The above may appear a little obscure on the first reading, but a little attention will convince the most skeptical that Horace is right.

THE ANCIENT DREAMERS.—One human mind, at work in its lonely recess, may put into play motive powers that may disturb the equilibrium of the world. Think only of the wonderful results that followed the deliberations of the Spanish soldier, who thought out the mighty spiritual empire of the Jesuits, who became the masters of Kings and Emperors, and sent their tireless missionaries of conquest to every quarter of the globe. Think of the stubborn German monk, in whose cell the mighty forces of the Reformation were conceived. Think of the awful consequences following the resolution of one old man who, with less than twenty followers, made war upon the haughty empire of American slavery. In their day, all these men were called fanatics and dreamers, but what splendid visions of reality ended their dreaming, and how universal has become their delusion!

An infantry company having been called a few days ago in Berlin, the Captain found there were eleven over the number. He requested those who had the largest families to withdraw, and after a pause one man stepped forward and stated he had nine children, the youngest newly born, and no one to attend to his business for him. He was at once dismissed, and on the following morning reappeared, and told his officer that as his wife was better, and understood his trade, he was resolved to march with his regiment.

On the 24th ult., the boilers of the new mill at Tacoma, W. T., blew up. The engineer was badly injured.

ANYTHING BUT THAT.—The Orville Record is responsible for the following incoherent:

An unfortunate holder of twenty or thirty tickets in the late Mercantile Library Lottery called us into his private office the other day, and proceeded to take a philosophical and semi-religious view of his situation. He said he could freely forgive the Jews for crucifying the Savior of the world, as it had been foretold by the prophets that such should be, and was necessary for the salvation of the world; that there was but performing the work appointed by God for them to do, in order that the world might be redeemed by the blood of our Savior, and the broad and forgiving grounds of pure Christianity illustrated; but, "said he," I never will forgive them for winning that $100,000.—d—n 'em.

The Connecticut Record and Courier of Nov. 3d, says:

On Wednesday and Thursday nights of last week, the city of Erie was lighted by natural gas obtained by the Erie Gas Company from a well sunk near their works. Thirteen gas wells are now in successful operation in various parts of the city. They are used mostly to furnish fuel and lights for manufactories. Other wells are being sunk. Gas is found at an average depth of 550 feet and the average yield per well is upwards of 20,000 cubic feet per day. The gas requires no purification, and is being rapidly introduced into private families for fuel. Thus far every well put down has proved a success.

The model of a colossal bronze statue, which several friends of the President propose to erect in commemoration of his military services, has just been placed on public exhibition at the rooms of an artist in Boston. The cast of the horse was taken from General Grant's favorite blooded war steed, Cincinnati. The figures are represented in a state of perfect repose. All the lines of the horse and rider are double the measurement from life, so that the bulk and weight of the statue will be eight times one size. The cast, when finished, will be sent to Philadelphia, where the bronze casting will be made from it. When completed, it will be placed on the flagged terrace south of the treasury building. It will be on a stone pedestal eight feet high, and will face to the south, making a most conspicuous object from Pennsylvania avenue.

James B. Gadsden, a well-known business man of Springfield, Illinois, returns to his residence, unexpected to his wife, found her in the arms of a man of Speed Butler, a merchant of Springfield. Butler retreated in the darkness, leaving behind the garments of which he had divested himself, while Gadsden fired his revolver at him six times, one shot hitting and seriously wounding him. By the midnight train the inconstant wife was shipped back to her parents in Indiana, and the injured husband at once filed a bill for a divorce. All parties were of highest respectability.

A Michigan census taker came across an intelligent man who had been married five years, but had never inquired his wife's Christian name.

The Walla Walla Union says that a petition is being circulated praying Congress for a charter and lands for the construction of a railroad from Steilacoom City, "the head" of the Sound, across the Cascade mountains, to the great valley of the Yakima to Walla Walla city; thence to Boise City, thence to the Central Pacific Railroad at the most suitable point.

"O kiss me and go!" said the maid of my heart, and proffered her lips as my pay to depart: "the more is approaching, my mother will know, my kindest and dearest. O kiss me and go!" She gave me the blessing in such a sweet way, that the thrill of its pleasure enticed me to stay; so we kissed till the morning came in with its glow, for she said every moment, "O kiss me and go."

A sailor, the other day, in describing his first effort to become a waterman, said that just at the close of a dark night he was sent aloft to see if he could see a light. After a short time he was hailed from the deck with: "Masthead, ahoy?" "Ay, ay, sir?" was the answer. "Do you see a light?" "Yes, sir," "Daylight, sir?" The lookout was ordered down with a run.

"GAY" NEWS.

Farmers Can Ride and Plow, BY SECURING ONE OF THE "GAY" PLOWS, Manufactured and sold for the very low price of $65 and $75.

THE simplicity and practical utility of this new Plow commends it favorably to the special notice of every farmer. It possesses a decided superiority over all other plows now in use. The wheels are four feet in diameter, and run on the unplowed land. Its entire construction is in no way complicated. The plow is managed in every manner with ease, and requires only two levers to be used in making any alteration. The superiority of the "Gay" Plow will be clearly shown by the following certificate:

We, the undersigned, citizens of Linn county, Oregon, having purchased and used upon our farms the "Gay" Plow, hereby certify that the same has given us entire satisfaction. Its facility for adjusting to suit the depth of furrow instead of from the seat, is simple and easy. We like the plow for its draught, because the same is brought to bear directly upon the plow-beam instead of the neck of the horse, and is strong and durable, all except the wood-work being constructed of wrought iron—no castings are used. The wheels running upon the solid land is an advantage over other gang-plows, in striking off land and in plowing, not having to make the necessary changes in the machinery, and the seat is always level, not the wing the driver forward or sideways as in other plows. Better work and more of it can be accomplished by the use of this Plow than by hand.

We take pleasure in recommending the "Gay" Plow to our brother farmers, as one having no superior in the market.
