Mr Fairfield sat in the drawing room of Mr. Haverstone's neat little villa, at Notting Hill, patiently awaiting the young lady he had called to see.

He had met Miss Haverstone, with her uncle and aunt, at Southend, and as she was very stylish, and, at the same time, an agreeable young lady, he had become intimate with her. This was the first call he had ventured to make since his how she would receive him. He did not send his card to her because he wished to surprise her-pleasantly as he hoped.

"Be sure and keep out of the way," he heard a sharp voice say. "I should be ashamed out of my wits if any one saw you limping about." There was no response to that injunction, and, a moment later, Miss Haverstone entered. She was a tall, handsome young girl, who seemed born to command; and vet there was a soft, bewildering light in her brown-black

Their greeting was over, they settled down into a quiet little chat; and Mr. Fuirfied was very much surprised to find how swiftly time had fled when he arose to go. She invited him to call again. and he accepted the invitation, and called

He was her escort with her aunt to the opera, theater, balls, in fact, to every place of amusement. In that way several months passed, and he was meditating asking Miss Haverstone to accompany him through life.

One evening he called rather earlier than usual, and went into the music room. Somebody was playing a little song, and doubt as to who the somebody must be, so he silently stepped over to her side. "Amelia," he said, gently.

The figure on the stool turned round

I am Amelia's lame sister." "Oh! a thousand pardons!" He could say no more. He was wondering why Amelia Haverstone had never spoken about this invalid sister. It voice, which touched him. He had not "You r misjudged Amelia-it was only the extreme sorrow which she felt that had kept her lips from speaking of Kate. He often went to the house after that; but he never caught a glimpse of a little lame figure, whose mournful song had rung in his ears ever since.

"I would like to see your sister," he ventured to observed, one evening. "Why does she keep herself so secluded?" "Because she is so sensitive," was the response. "I have tried to induce her me in here; but in vain."

He had to be satisfied with that reply, though he felt a great curiosity to see her. He imagined, by the outlines of her face, which had been partly defined in the twilight, that she was pretty, of course, but not so pretty as Amelia.

The next morning he called again He had some concert tickets, and would just step in a moment on his way to the "You need not annouce me," he said,

He put his hand to the door-knob, and then he hesitated. He did not wish to enact the part of the listener, but he had eaughe the mention of his own name, and he had a little pardonable curiosity.

"Do you love Mr. Fairfields?" he heard a soft voice ask.

"I'm glad the witch has asked that question for me," he muttered to himself ing!" he waited impatiently for Amelia's "Love !" she sneered. "Who has anything to do with that old fangled notion now? Mr. Fairfield is rich and a man of the world. What more do I require?"

"But he may require something else,"

"But he may require something else," Kate responded, warmly. "He seemed so good that I do not know how you can help but love him, sister?"

"Indeed! Perhaps you have fallen in love with him yourself? If you have, I wish you could hear a few remarks he made about the ridiculous way you limped about the room that night! I

"Hush, Amelia," said another voice -that of the aunt. How can you hurt Kate's feelings in such a cruel, and uncalled for manner? See, she is crying ! Poor child! she has trouble enough without you adding a grain more; and to think how that trouble come upon her! Once for all, Amelia, I tell you, you must give up going to that ball. If you must take the money for another dress, we can not afford to take Kate over to

"She can wait," was the pettish response. "Mr. Fairfield will propose, and then I shall be off your hands."

"Amelia, I am shocked!" was her aunt's reply.

But Fairfield waited to hear no more. He had, in fact, already heard too much Oregon : for Miss Haverstone's future anticipa-

"Saved !" he muttered. "This visit was a special plan of Providence. Say nothing of my call," he continued, addressing the servant, whose ill concealed glee betrayed she knew what was going on in there, and slipped a half crown into wall of rock or stone four and a half feet her hand.

"You're a gentleman," she ejaculated ; "and I'm glad ye have found that creareturn to London, and he was wondering ture out. He went over to Haverstone's villa before the usual visiting hour. "Tell Miss Kate that I wish to her," he said to the servant. The good-hearted woman laughed outried the message. Miss Kate was dear to her heart.

"To see her !" Amelia ejaculated. "Who can it be? Be sure, Kate, and get out of the parlor before Fairfield

With that injunction ringing in her ears, Kate went down to the parlor. Mr.

Fairfield rose to meet her.
"Mr. Fairfield!" she stammered, blushing. He looked at her. Miss Amelia's beauty dwindled by the comparison he made. This little creature, with her abundance of soft, golden hair, and blue Somebody was playing a little song, and eyes, and wistful face, was far more singing in a soft voice. He had no beautiful than Amelia Haverstone's had ever been. "Yes, Miss Kate."

"Did you ask for me ?" "I did. Sit down here beside me. have something to say to you."

She obeyed him silently. She was "Pardon me," he returned, "I have had ridiculed her on account of her misfortune, she believed, and now she was doomed to sit beside him.

"I know why you shrink from me," he said softly. "Very unintentionally, I overheard a little of your family conversation this morning, and was happy to have your sister's true character revealed to me.

She lo ked up frankly into his face. How should I know? She had never been out in society with Mr. Fairfield, "Shall I tell you?"

"If you please."

She caught her hand quickly from "This is too cruel a jest," she cried.

"You misunderstand me," he said gently; "I mean what I say. I love you too dearly to mock you. I want too marry you, and take you to Paris with me, and get you cured." She hid her face and wept; not tears of sorrow, but rather those of joy. The great, good gift of life, which she had coveted, had come to her at last.

"Do your tears mean yes?" he asked; and, though he obtained no response, he was satisfied. He left her. She went to her own

She sprang from the table and ran to her room, where she had a violent attact of hysterics. The prize she had tried to win was lost.

Four weeks later, Kate was married, and started for France. A year later, she came home perfectly restored to health and strength. Amelia was still single, but she vouchsafed no word of welcome to Mrs. Fairfield.

Farmers Can Ride and Plow.

BY SECURING ONE OF THE "GAY" PLOWS. Manufactured and sold for the very low price $65 and $75. THE simplicity and practicability of this new Plow commends it favorably to the special notice of every farmer. It possesses a decided superiority over all other plows now in use. The wheels are four feet in diameter, and run on the unplowed land. Its entire construction is in no way complicated. The plow is managed in every manner with ease, and requires only two levers to be used in making any alteration. The superiority of the "Gay" Plow will be clearly shown by the following certificate: We, the undersigned, citizens of Lina county. Oregon, having purchased and used upon our farms the "Gsy" Plow, hereby certify that the same has given us entiresatisfaction. Its facility for adjusting to suit the depth of furrow without moving from the seat, is simple and easy. We like the plow for its draught, because the same is brought to bear directly upon the plow-beam instead of the carriage; also, tecause it is strong and durable, all except the wood-work being constructed of wrought iron—no ca tings are used. The wheels running upon the solid land is an advantage over other gang plows, in striking of land and in plowing, not having to make the necessary changes in the machinery, and the sent is always level, not thr wing the driver forward or sideways as in other plows. Better work and more of it can be accomplished by the use of this Plow than by hand.

We take pleasure in recommending the "GAY" Plow to our brother farmers, as one having no superior in Oregon.

Allow me to call your attention to my PREPAPATION OF COMPOUND EXTRACT BUCHU. The component parts are, BUCHU, Long Leaf CUBEBS, JUNIPER BEERIES.

Mole of Hreparation:—Buchu, is vacuo. Inniper Berries, by distillation, to form a fine gin. Cubebs extracted by displacement with spirits obtained from Juniper Berries; very little augar is used, and a small proportion of spirit. It is more palatable than any now in use.

Buchu as prepared by Druggists, is of a dark color. It is a-plan that emits its fragrance; the action of a fiame destroys this (its active principle) leaving a dark and glutinous descetion. Mins is the color of ingredients. The Buchu in my preparation predominates; the smallest quantity of the other ingredients are added to prevent fermentation; upon inspection it will be found not to be a Tincture, as made in Pharmacopeas, nor is it a Syrup— and therefore can be used in cases where fever or inflammation exists. In this, you have the knowledge of the ingredients and the mode of preparation.

Hoping that you will favor it with a trial, and that upon inspection it will meet with your apprebation, with a feeling of profound confidence,
