Portland City Printing.

The Salem Mercury, litigant organ ver, comments as follows upon the ourse of the Portland Herald in claiming under the litigant law; all the advertising of the city of Portland:

We are sorry to see a disposition manifested by the Herald, calculated to make a good and necessary law edious in the eyes of the people. As we understand it, the Herald claims that under the liti-This claim is manifestly erroneous and ridiculous. The language of the litigant Act is explicit on what advertising it contemplates; an nowhere in it can we discover that that class of advertising of which any city in this State bas exclusive which any city in this State has exclusive jurisdiction, is included in its provisions. The litigant Act manifestly enough has no relation or reference to printing authorized alone by ordinance of any city. The advertising, if any, provided for in the charter of the city of Portland, being "authorized and required" by a "law of this State," would belong to the Herald county. The law says: "And thereafter all notices, summonses, and advertise-ments of whatever nature, authorized or required to be published by any law of this State," etc. The law has no reference whatever to the ordinary business rived in San Francisco on Monday even.

It is again positively asserted that land as a litigant paper, for that city has not provided by ordinance for the appointment of a city litigant organ Another view of the case. Honors and public emoluments generally imply res-nonsibility of some sort. Suppose that through the negligence or incompetence of the Herald it fails to do and perform certain advertising as any given ordinance shall direct, and that in consequence any person is damaged. Where will such person have his recourse? On the secur-Walters, who was tried at Lewiston (I. T.) last Fall and convicted of the murder of Yates, and granted a new trial tors for the county of Multuomah and not the city of Portland. The records of the city of Portland show no account or trace of any litigant paper ever having been appointed for that city, or other than that provided for by ordinance or resolution of the Common Council, and that was the Oregonian.

In conclusion we have this to say. If that was the Oregonian.

In conclusion we have this to say: If the Herald is entitled to the city advertising of the city of Portland, it is more tising of the city of Portland, it is more than its proprietors expected or calculated upon, and that not a single member of either House of the Legislature that enacted the litigant law intended that it should apply to the printing provided for by the Common Council of any city. And if, by any "twist" in the "mysteries" of the law we could hold the printing for so small a recompense. It is a bone we do not covet at the price of our conscience and what is palpably fair and

In the Chicago Times of April 7th ap-Milwaukee, Wisconsin, April 4th:

From the bottom of my heart I thank you for writing and publishing in your valuable paper of this date the article "Jeff. Davis airs his own corpse." You have done justice to that distinguished traitor, and the sooner the people of the South learn that there is to be no more rebellion the better for them. I trust if they ever attempt it again that there may be in the Presidential chair a man of the stamp of Andrew Jackson, who will hang ever devil of them. In a summary of the condition of the breadstuffs market, the New York Finanfor Marion, and supposed to be the breadstuffs market, the New York Finanofficial mouthpiece of Governor Grocial Chronicle says that the advance in flour and wheat is more than forty per cent, as compared with March, 1870. This advance is accounted for by the increased demand for export during the war on the continent, which lasted about eleven months, effecting a large reduction in the surplus stocks held one year ago. The prospects for the maintenance of the present prices are thus summed

> The situation in France, Germany and Belgium would seem to indicate that a call upon Great Britain and the United States to meet a deficiency, will be necessary, but of course so long as the present disorganization in France continues, shipments to that quarter must be held in check. And may it not prove that the check. And may it not prove that the means of buying have been largely swept away by the same cause which seem to have made buying necessary? The revolutionary proceedings in Paris have greatly impaired the credit of France and her people; industrial pursuits have been crippled by the war, and all legitimate sources of income diminished. Vast quantities of food have already been shipped to the Franch markets and when shipped to the French markets, and when these shall be exhausted spring will be advanced. Hence there can be no ceradvanced. Hence there can be no certain reliance placed upon the renewal of any considerable demand from the Continent; and, under these circumstances unless there is strong evidence of a short crop this season in Great-Britain, the West may be considered fortunate if its surplus for the remainder of the crop year can be disposed of without incurring any considerable reduction in values.

The determined spirit of resistance exhibited in these provinces causes him, it is said, already to consider uncertain the fruit of his conquest, and he would, no doubt, be disposed to accept something more certain and less danger-ous in exchange for the two provinces. It is rumored that during the last two days overtures, not wholly unofficial, treating upon this subject have been made to the chief of the executive itself into one of money, and it is be-lieved that were the indemnity increased by one and a half millards Count Bismarck would cede to France her provinces now annexed. Count Bismarck has admitted himself to be seriously embarrassed with regard to the political and commercial organization of the conuered territory, and the greater part of commercial Germany energetically pro-tests against the damage and loss which will be occasioned by the great amount of competition offered by the Mulhouse manufacturers.
