A Great Bargain.

THE FARM KNOWN AS "FARMOUNT Lake" is offered for sale at $10,000 in coin—$4,000 in hand, and the remainder in six equal annual payments, with interest from date. The tract is in good shape, being nearly a square, containing about 600 acres of rich soil; and is diversified with forests vast, fair lawns, lovely oaks, and willows sitting by the lake, the woodland and prairie so interesting as to make it one of the most attractive places in the State. It is situated on the west side of the Willamette river, within half a mile of Albany, which is known as being in the heart of the best agricultural portion of Oregon. The location is beautiful. It has a good stone quarry, about 100 acres under fence, a two-story frame barn with shedding 90 feet square; a large and handsome new house two-stories high, thoroughly painted inside and out, the large cupboards and book-cases being fixtures, and the house having under its whole length a good dry cellar. In addition to these there is a neat well-house, a wood-house and all other necessary out-houses. There is a meadow, large pasture, orchards, garden, &c., &c. It is susceptible of being divided into four farms, all of them having good soil, fuel and rail timber, and three of them having stock-water.

For particulars address J. C. Mendenhall, Esq., Albany, or the undersigned at Portland.

The Albany Register.

Witchcraft in Illinois.
STRANGE PERFORMANCE IN FRANKLIN COUNTY—A COUPLE OF FRISKY YOUNG FEMALES.

A correspondent of a western paper writes as follows from Frankfort, Illinois, under date of June 16th: "Two young ladies, daughters of James Williams, living about eight miles from here, have been attacked in a singular manner by what is said to be witchcraft. Witchcraft, or whatever kind of craft it may be, it puzzles the physicians. The young ladies were first affected about the 1st of April. I think it was known among the neighbors that there was SOMETHING WRONG WITH THEM.

But any strangeness to their action was imputed to insanity. Matters remained thus until last Wednesday, when their father called upon a physician of this place and got him to visit them. Since that time their actions have become generally known, and crowds of men and women have gone to see them. Some fifty or a hundred persons are there every night, and they say it is quite entertaining to witness their performances. They are perfectly sane during the day, but at the approach of night they become frenzied and uncontrollable, performing feats that the best acrobats could hardly perform. Sealing the house, they DANCE UPON THE COMB OF THE BUILDING, apparently with perfect ease and impunity, uttering at the same time the most hideous and frenzied screams. Very frequently they take something like fits, or spasms, and fall perfectly stiff; but if they chance to be on the house-top, they never fall off, however near the eaves they may be. They are aged respectively sixteen and eighteen years. And are both rather small, being below the medium height. During the day, at which time they are perfectly sane, they seem to be rather modest and reserved, but will converse freely with any one. They are fond of music, and play upon the dulcimer. The spell comes upon both at or near the same time, generally between sundown and dark, and first manifests itself by both of them breaking into a run. They always run north, in the direction of the house of an old lady, who, they say, has been

PRACTICING WITCHCRAFT UPON THEM.
They say she has recently put harder spells upon them, on account of their telling something that she had forbidden, and that she and a cat are with them in their house-top dance. They have a language which they use in conversing with each other, and which they seem to understand; but it is "Comanche" to everybody else. There are some strange things connected with them. They catch and eat all the flies they can get hold of, until nausea is produced, when they vomit at the same time. What one does the other is doing. Their gestures are alike and simultaneous. They seem to be both moved by one controlling power. You can imagine the excitement when I tell you that, since I began to write, nearly fifty people have passed through our little village to see the girls."

THE VAMPIRE SUPERSTITION.—An extraordinary story is reported from Prussian Poland. It appears that among the Poles and Hungarians the myth of vampires still finds credence. A country squire at Roslasin, in Posen, died some months ago, his death being speedily followed by that of his eldest son, and the dangerous illness of his relatives, all of which cases occurred as suddenly as they seemed unaccountable. The deceased was at once suspected of being a vampire, rising from his grave and sucking the blood of his surviving friends. To prevent further mischief, his second son determined to chop off the corpse's head, for which enterprise he obtained the assistance of some equally superstitious peasants, at a very high price. The head was to be laid with the feet, while an assistant collected the blood dripping from the neck in a vessel to give to the relatives to drink. The deed was delayed by the interference of the parish priest, but was in the end effected at night, not, however, without the unasked witness. The case is now before the Prussian Court of appeals. The local court had sentenced the desecrators of the churchyard to three months' imprisonment, and it seems likely that they will have to pay that penalty for their superstition.

A PLEA FOR THOSE WHO SLEEP IN THE MORNING.—The fact is, that as life becomes more concentrated, and its pursuits more eager, short sleep and early rising become impossible. We take more sleep than our ancestors, and we wake more because we want more. Six hours sleep will do very well for a plowman or brick layer, or any other man who has no other exhaustion than that produced by manual labor, and the sooner he takes it after his labor is over the better; but for a man whose labor is mental, the stress of work is on his brain and nervous system, and he who is tired in the evening will find a day of mental application, for him neither early to bed nor early to rise is wholesome. He needs letting down to the level of repose. The longer interval between the active use of the brain and his retirement to bed, the better his chance of sleep and refreshment. To him an hour after midnight is probably as good as two hours before it, and even then, his sleep will not be so restful, and he will restore himself as it will his neighbor who is typically tired. He must not only go to bed later, but lie longer. His best sleep probably is in the early morning hours, when all the nervous excitement has passed entirely away, and he is in absolute rest.

Comic Geography—America.

America, or as it is most properly termed, the United States, is a lengthy patch of ground stretching North and South from Boston as far as can be seen through a piece of smoked glass with the naked eye.

It was formerly supposed to be 4,800 miles long, but from late measurements it was found to be 2,400 miles short.

The United States, in power and extent, wallows all creation. It is the most grandifarious, gigantic, glorious country on the face of the green earth, anywhere between sunrise and sunset. The natives are more enlightened—talk more bunkum, make better "cocktails," manufacture more greenbacks, eat more pumpkin pie, drive faster trotting horses, chew more tobacco, expostorate more freely, have more stambost explosions, longer rivers, larger prairies, more quack doctors, less babies, bigger Banker Hill monument, smaller self-esteem, larger national debt, richer shoddy and petroleum aristocrats, larger eagles and buffaloes, more Mormons, and more Star Spangled banners than the natives of the Sandwich Islands and New Jersey combined.

The copartnership started in 1776 with 13 (which, needless to say, is a baker's dozen) States. The rest have been taken in since. The Southern States considered themselves taken in considerably, if any dependence can be placed in the statement of Jeff Davis, a celebrated Historian and a native of Connecticut by his first wife.

The inhabitants reside principally in brown stone houses, and depend, to a great extent, for subsistence on eating and drinking. They eat pumpkin pie and tobacco, and drink Bourbon and "Jersey Litenin." The climate is temperate, which speaks volumes for the extraordinary exertions of John B. Gough.

The principal State is called Massachusetts. This State derived its name from the following curious incident: Several years ago a colored African slave of the Negro persuasion cultivated the tobacco plant in the vicinity of Boston, one day, as one of the Puritans was passing the slave, he asked the contractor if he used tobacco.

"No, sir," replied Sambo, "I hoes it, but Massa chews it."
John Quincy Adams was so sensibly struck with the originality of the idea that he immediately proposed to the "selectmen" that they should choose it for the name of that State.

Boston, its principal village, is universally known as the "Hub" of the Universe, around which all creation revolves. Its chief production is Crooked Streets and Big Oysters. It has also long been famous for its Baker, Hooper and Brewster, (Noty Bessy—John Brown was bred in Virginia, but a singularly beautiful, classical ballad, supposed to have been written by Bret Harte, states that at present "his body lies a mouldering in the ground.") Boston is justly celebrated for its literature. The greatest living bard resides in the "Hub." He is called the Hub Bard and is supposed to be a lineal descendant of Old Mother Hubbard, an adopted wife of Cotton Mather, one of the Pilgrim step fathers. Boston is also noted for its common schools, because they are on the common, yet they are uncommon fine schools.

Common's cool in Winter, and the boys and girls who attend it pond-r studiously when they are learning—to skate.

Salem, which is noted for its Witches, is pleasantly situated in the vicinity of Massachusetts. The report that the Witch of Endor had requested to end her days there, lacks confirmation. The inhabitants subsist principally on sand-witches and are generally well bred. They are also largely engaged in shipping. They build vessels and sail 'em. In ancient times it was generally supposed that the human race was divided into two sexes—male and female. This idea is, however, hardly correct, for by robbing the common cool in Winter, and the boys and girls who attend it pond-r studiously when they are learning—to skate.

Plymouth was the landing place of the Pilgrim Fathers, who come over in the Great Eastern commanded by Christopher Columbus, which is graphically described in Byron's Pilgrim's Progress, showing how well the pilgrims progressed while crawling up the rock. General George Washington is generally known as the Pilgrim "Father of his country." When quiet a small boy he cut down a dried apple tree to show his mother that he couldn't tell a lie. On Plymouth Rock the first cradle of Liberty was rocked by one of the Pilgrim Mothers.

New Bedford was formerly noted for its rum and whale fisheries, but Nantucket-it all.

New Hampshire is principally inhabited by mountaineers. They belong to the White family, and consist of seven or eight peaks, each one averaging about 6,000 feet high—which is very good for high. The natives have a peak ugar appearance, and live chiefly on shoddy tourists who go there for a change of climb.
