LINSEED TEA FOR SICK HORSES.

Linseed tea is not only a valuable restorative for sick horses, but is exceedingly useful in cases of inflammation of the membranes peculiar to the organs of respiration and digestion; it shields and lubricates the same, tranquilizes the irritable state of the parts, and favors healthy action. We have prescribed linseed tea in large quantities, during the past month, for horses laboring under the prevailing influenza; they seemed to derive much benefit from it, and generally drank it with avidity. Aside from the benefit we derive from the action of mucilage and oil, which the seed contains, its nutritive elements are of some account, especially when given to animals laboring under soreness in the organs of deglutition, which incapacitates from swallowing more solid food. In the event of any animal becoming prostrated by inability to masticate or swallow more food, linseed tea may be resorted to, and in case of irritable cough, the addition of a little honey makes it still more useful. In the latter form it may be given to animals laboring under acute or chronic disease of the urinary apparatus, more especially of the kidneys. To prepare linseed tea, put a couple of handfuls of seed into a bucket, and pour a gallon and a half of boiling water upon it. Cover it up a short time, then add a couple of quarts of cold water, when it will be fit for use.

CONTINUOUS GROWTH OF ANIMALS.—The most successful breeders of horses, cattle, sheep, or swine, know from experience that although they possess the best breeding animals, they will not be successful in producing superior stock, if a continuous growth of the young animals is not kept up. In order to begin in time at this indispensable preparation for success, the breed mares, cows, ewes, and sows are carefully and suitably fed while with young, and as soon as the young animals make their appearance they are taken the greatest care of, the dams being suitably fed while suckling, and when the young ones are weaned, they are not supposed to want for food or drink a single hour. By this means a rapid and continuous growth is kept up, and the animals attain a large size and heavy weight at an early age. When breeding animals are not properly fed and comfortably sheltered in winter, the bad effect of such treatment is not confined to their own of condition—it is shared by their progeny, and can never be remedied. When young stock are not well fed and comfortably sheltered in winter, their growth becomes stunted, and no subsequent amount of good treatment can repair the damage. Young animals may suffer for want of suitable provender in summer and autumn, as well as in winter, and when this happens, it stops continuous growth and prevents ultimate success in the object of the breeder.—Western Rural.

BALKY HORSE.—The brain of a horse seems to entertain but one thought at a time; for this reason continued whipping is out of the question, and only confirms his stubborn resolve. But if you can by any means change the direction of his mind, give him a new subject to think of, nine times out of ten you will have no further trouble in starting him. As simple a trick as a little pepper, aloes or the like thrown back on his tongue, will often succeed by turning attention to the taste in his mouth. "The pair of cattle to a log chain around the horse's neck" is an intricate and expensive remedy, and a good many people may not be so lucky as your Fond du Lac man in having a yoke of cattle handy for the occasion. A simpler and cheaper remedy that will result far differently is to take a couple of turns of common wrapping twine, such as grocers use, around the fore leg just enough for the horse to feel and tie it in a bow knot. At the first cluck he will generally go dancing off, and after going a short distance you can get out, removing the string to prevent injury to the tendon in your further drive. The first lesson in this simple process was in Lexington; subsequently experience has proven its utility when applied to a balky horse. The philosophy of the appliance is something on the same principle as that whereof we read for preventing hens from scratching up the garden. Put gaffs or spurs on the hens, reversing them—the points of the points up, have the points downward. Then when the hen lifts a leg to scratch, as it descends the point of the spur catches in the ground, placing the foot forward, and the stroke of the other leg is attended with like results until the hen walks herself right out of the garden.—Turf, Field and Farm.
