TELL YOUR WIFE.

"Tell my wife!" said Aaron Little, speaking aloud, yet to himself, in half amused and half troubled way. "Tell my wife, indeed! Much good that will do! What does she know about lusiness, and money matters and the tricks of trade? No there's no hope there."

And Aaron Little sat musing with a perplexed countenance. He held a new-paper in his hand, and his eyes had just been lingering over a paragraph in which the writer suggested to business men in trouble the propriety of consulting their wives.

"Talk to them freely about your affairs," it said: "Let them understand exactly your condition. Tell them of your difficulties, your embarrassments, and your plans for extricating yourselves from the entanglements in which you are involved. My word for it, you will get help in nine cases out of ten. Women have quick perceptions. They reach conclusions by a nearer way than reasoning, and noticed the style in which her house is yet the solution of a difficult question long before your slow moving thoughts bring you near enough for accurate observation. Tell your wives, then, men in trouble, all about your affairs. Keep nothing back. The better will be the perceptions."

"A very fine theory," said Aaron Little, tossing the newspaper from him, and leaning back in his chair, "But it won't do in my case."

Tell Betsy! Yes, I'd like to see myself doing it. A man must be hard pushed indeed; when he goes home to consult his wife on business affairs." And so Aaron Little dismissed the subject. He was in considerable doubt and perplexity of mind. Things had not gone well with him for a year past. Dull business and bad debts had placed his affairs in rather an unpromising condition. Taking trade as it had been for the passed six months, he could not imagine how, with the resources at his command, his payments shall not order the new parlor carwere to be made.

"I must get more capital," he said to himself. "That is plain. And with more capital must come in a partner. I don't like partnerships. It is very difficult for two men to work together harmoniously. You may get entangled with a rough. It's a risky business, but I see no other way out of this trouble. My own capital is too light for the business I am doing, and INVITE THE ATTENTION OF THE public to their rull stock of the latest styles in gentlemen's and youth's boots, shoes, gatters, Oxford ties, etc., etc., as well as to the very latest thing out in the line of ladies' and misses' galiers, balmornis, Newport ties, Antoinette buskins, and many other new and fashionable styles, just received at the City Boot Store, which they will sell as rapidly as they can find purchasers who wish first-class goods at join me, and he says he can command half price." pleasure. But I want his money more than his aid in business. He might remain a silent partner if he chose. I'll call and see him this very night, and we will talk the matter over. If he can bring in ten thousand dollars, I think that will settle the matter at

With this conclusion, Aaron Little returned home, after closing his warehouse for the day. Tea being over, he made preparations for going out, with the intention of calling upon Mr. Lawrence. As he reached his hand for his great coat, a voice seemed to "Tell your wife. Talk to her about it.

But he rejected the thought, instantly drawing on his coat.

"Where are you going, Aaron?" asked his wife, coming forth from the dining-room. "Out for a little while," he replied.

I'll be back in half an hour or so. "Out where?" " Tell her Aaron, tell her all 'about it," said the voice speaking in his mind. Nonsence! She don't understand anything about business. She can't help me, he reasoned.

"Tell your wife." The words seemed as if uttered aloud in his ears. "What are you going to see him about ?"

" Tell her!" Mr. Little stood irresolute. What good would telling her do?" "What's the matter, Aaron? You've been dall for some time past. Nothing wrong with you, I hope?" and she had had her hand upon his arm. and leaned towards him in a kind

Mr. Little let his eyes fall to the floor, and sat some moments in silence.

At last looking up, he said:
"The fact is, Betsy, I must have more capital in my business. I cannot go on without it. Lawrence says he can command ten thousand dollars. He would like to join us. He has said as much two or three times."

"And you were going to see him on that business to-night?"

" Or what?" His wife looked at him steadily and without any sign of weak an xiety. "Or I may become bankrupt."

"I am sorry to hear you say that, Aaron," and her voice trembled preceptibly. "But I'm glad you've told me. I

"O, as to that, the amount it will cost can make no great difference," said Mr. Little. "The parior does look shabby, and I know you've set your heart on a new carpet." " Indeed it will make a difference," replied the little woman in her decided way. "The last feather breaks the camel's back. Aaron Little shall not fail because of his wife's extravanow, even if it were offered to me at

"You are a brave true woman, Betsy," said Mr. Little, kissing his wife, in the glow of a new born feeling of admiration.

"I hope that I shall ever be a true brave wife," returned Mrs. Little, "willing always to help my husband either in saving or earning, as the case may be. But let us talk more about affairs, let me see the trouble nearer. Must you have ten thousand dollars right away ?" "O, no, its not so bad as that. was looking ahead, and seeking to provide the means for coming payments. I don't want a partner, as far as the business itself is concerned. I flag was hung out. When the aucdon't like partnerships, they are always tioneer made up his accounts, he had accompanied with annovances or in hand a little over three thousand danger. "The money would come dearly at the price of the man, it you took Mr. the sailor sav?"

" By reducing expenses?" Mr. Little shook his head.

"Don't say no too quickly." re-plied his wife. "Let us go over the whole matter at home and at the store. Suppose four thousand dollars were saved in the year, what difference would that make?"
