If some hay is placed in a glass of pure rain-water, and allowed to soak for a few days in a sunny place, and if it be then removed, the water will be found, under a powerful microscope, to contain many very small moving things, which are called infusoria, from their being produced after refusing the hay. The eggs which were on the hay bred these myriads of small things, which often have a very beautiful coat of transparent flint or silica. If the water is kept clean, and not allowed to decompose or smell, generation after generation of the infusoria live, die, and fall to the bottom of the glass. They form a very delicate film there and minute portions of it, when examined under a high magnifying power, show the silicious skeletons of shells very distinctly.

Now, many strata in the earth are formed entirely of the remains of infusoria, and a very familiar example is the Tripoli powder, from the polishing slate of Bilin, Bohemia. A grain of Tripoli powder contains no fewer than one hundred and eighty-seven millions of the transparent and flinty skeletons of dead animalcules; yet the layers of earth which are made up of them at Bilin extended for miles.

In the harbor of Wisnar, in the Baltic, they increase and multiply at a great rate; for seventeen thousand cubic feet of mud formed every year there, and every grain of it contains one billion of the beautiful silicious remains of the infusoria. In the island of Barbadoes there is a thick mass of the beautiful flinty sea animalcules, and they are in such numbers, that it must be supposed the dead minute things were constantly falling in showers from the sea to the bottom.

THE EX-EMPEROR AT TORQUAY.—The late Emperor of the French is at Torquay, in a hotel still unfinished, called the Hotel Imperial. He is surrounded by half a dozen devoted adherents, as well as by the faithful Felix and five servants, one of whom only wears the livery of the Emperor and fills the double position of sentinel and valet. He is always to be seen sitting near the entrance, ready to take the cards of visitors, reading invariably the Constitution or Siecle. The party occupy in all fifteen rooms. They never show themselves in the public parlors, which, however, does not prevent the hotel from being crowded with guests, who rejoice to breathe the same air with his Majesty. They send him flowers and fruit, and place themselves where they can see him pass by. When they meet at the table similar remarks to these may be heard: "How many times have you met the Emperor?" "I have seen him three times!" "I met him just at the very minute he was blowing his nose!" "How fortunate!"

THE MOUNT CENIS TUNNEL.—The longest and rapidest subterranean journey ever yet made, was made on Wednesday Sept. 14th, through the Mount Cenis Tunnel—the train passing from Italy to the north side of the Alps in forty minutes. The highest temperature of the cars in passing through is said to have been 25° Centigrade (75° Fahrenheit). There was a good deal of anxiety felt as to the return journey, lest the steam set off in the tunnel might have still been hanging there in clouds; but two hours later, when the train returned, there was no trace of the vapor, which had escaped during the first journey.

While the Oregon City Enterprise is enlarging on the "Rascallies of Radicalism," will it be good enough to take time to explain what is the matter with the irredeemable school fund of Clackamas county? The present treasurer of that county and his immediate predecessor are both Democrats, and the people of Clackamas are reported to be anxious for an inquiry into some little transactions in their official career. It is thought that the "irreducible school fund" is wrongly named, since experience shows that it can be reduced with little difficulty.—Oregonian.

THE BEST WATERS.—If American women would settle it in their minds that a happy face gives a better welcome than the finest dinner and ask: that a dinner of two courses, which could be well and easily cooked and served, is more satisfactory to the guests than an elaborate entertainment which has cost too much labor; and is given with too evident effort; that which we can do easily and naturally, is the best that can be possibly done for a friend, whose chance or invitation has brought under our roof—a new era would dawn for both guests and entertainers. The company of our friends, instead of being had seldom, and at the risk of weariness and impoverishment, would be continually sought, and for no unworthy ends, of display, but for those higher motives which alone deserves to bring together men and women. Nor would there be less, but more, enjoyment of those luxuries which the rich can properly command; because the endeavor for, and the envy of them on the part of others would be discontinued by a healthy tone of feeling, prescribing the noblest object of ambition, and a better classification that can depend upon the possession or want of wealth. In such a state of things a Utopian dream, of shall the miseries of homelessness, on the present plan drive us to an effort, to which the contemplation of an ideal however excellent, might fail to incite us?

AN EXAMPLE TO AMERICAN WOMEN.—It was noticed by a somewhat close observer as the Executive Mansion, says the Washington Star of the 2d inst., that of all the throng of ladies who call to pay their respects to Mrs. Grant, about the only one not dressed in silk, satin or velvet, or all three combined, was Mrs. Thornton, wife of Sir Edward Thornton, the British minister, who wore a dress of dark soft, warm-looking material, suitable for winter wear. The deviation from the general rule was as pleasing and creditable as it was striking, and the question at once suggested itself whether, if the representative of one of the richest and greatest nations of earth, and herself a lady of ample means and unquestionable refinement, could set such a lesson in economy and good taste, the mothers, wives and daughters of America might not profit by the excellent example, and modify somewhat their foolish and almost wicked extravagance in dress. The inquiry, which is a pertinent one, and of more weight than might at first appear, we commend to the thoughtful attention of our lady readers. We assure them, also, that in any reform in that direction, they will have the hearty approval of the sensible portion of the sterner sex. It had been said

DEPLORABLE.—Yesterday we noticed on the train, a lawyer of ability, one who has risen to distinguished honors in California, in a state of intoxication, which was both appalling and disgusting, and which must have been repulsive to his fellow passengers. We knew him when his name was on every tongue, and when he stood before the Supreme Court of that State as one of the ablest practitioners. We feel that he is merely existing in the bare fact of existence, and fast going where hundreds have gone—the downward road. The misery he has caused, the despair of a devoted wife, the banishment of friends, and his, and he stands to-day the slave of passion, with a once bright and noble intellect swallowed up on the fiery stimulating draught. "No angel of mercy has yet appeared to him," and he seems deserted and uncared for. Gladly do we let his name pass among "the things that were," only feeling and for humanity's wreck, and the loss of a mind above the common average—a loss to distinction and fame.—Oakland Tri-Week.
