Things Worth Remembering.

Weak eyes may be strengthened by rubbing alcohol on the forehead once or twice a day.

Dandruff on the head may be removed by the use of buttermilk, applied once or twice a week. It makes the hair glossy and the scalp healthy.

How to save your shoe soles. It consists merely in melting together tallow and resin, in the proportion of two parts of the former to one part of the latter, and applying the preparation, hot, to the soles of the shoes or boots, as much as the leather will absorb.

Hot milk is a specific for diarrhea. A pint every four hours will check the most violent diarrhea, stomach-ache, incipient cholera or dysentery. In fact so much should rarely be given, as it causes subsequent constipation. Half a pint every meal generally reduces gradually and pleasantly any ordinary diarrhea.

It has been proved by experiment that the more rapidly an animal is fattened the less quantity of food is necessary to sustain its mere vitality. Thus an animal is more cheaply fattened by consuming ten bushels of corn in two months, than if four months were occupied in the process. Liberal and abundant feed is the most economical, and a saving in producing the same result is a gain in the profit.

HOW A DUTCHMAN GOT EVEN.

—One time there lived a jovial Dutchman whose name was Hames Von Shrimpetffel. He had a wife. He also had a little grocery, where beer and such personal property was sold. He gave credit to a parcel of dry customers and kept his book with a piece of white chalk on the headboard of his bedstead.

One day Mrs. Shrimpetffel, in a neat fit, took it upon herself to clean house and things. So she did, and she cleaned the headboard, and soap and water settled the old man's accounts by wiping away every chalk mark.

Pretty soon the old vender of things came into the house and saw what ruin his frau had wrought. Then he said:

"Mein Gott, Frau Shrimpetffel, what for you make a ruined man of me I guess not? You make vipe away all dem name and figures what I owe dem fellers what's going to pay me before dey get ready, an' I lose more than swei humit tollar, ain't it?"

His frau left the room in fear and disgust. When she returned he had covered the head-board with chalk marks. Then she said:

"Hannes, you make dem all right again, don't it?"

"Vell, my frau, I make de figures all, but I put down some petter names as dem oder fellers vot you vipe out!"

MR. SEWARD'S MISTAKE.

James Brooks writes to a New York paper from China: "They tell a good story in Pekin of Gov. Seward when here—doubtless a lie, but too good a story to be lost for that. The expectations of the ex-Governor were doubtless great when he entered the great capital empire, with which he had made a great treaty, and he therefore indulged in the great expectation of a great welcome. As he entered the gates of Pekin, a great funeral procession was coming out, with music, catafalque, etc., etc., all as imposing as a grand procession of some great dead man could well be made. The Governor was entering with the marine band of the Colorado, mounted on donkeys, as the grand procession was going out. The great living and the great dead thus met. The Governor naturally enough concluded this in honor of his grand entree, and he rose in his open sedan chair, and bowed, and then ordered a halt, and got out and bowed, and bowed again, to the catafalque and the dead. The Chinese think all foreigners are rather mad, and hence did not marvel over it as much as they might, but when Governor Seward found out what he had done, the story is he was more mad than pleased."

WORKING AND FATTENING FOOD.

—We begin to think that the old distinction between the food of a working and a fattening animal must soon be abandoned, and that it will be found that the food which is best adapted for a bullock kept close to the plow is also that which is most likely to put up meat on a fattening bullock, and to stimulate the lactal secretion in the milch cow. The recent investigations of Voit, Houghton, Eick Wislicemus, and others prove that fat and other non-nitrogenous foods are those chiefly used in maintaining the motions of the body. If the results of these physiologists' inquiries be accepted, then it is quite evident that horses should be fed on food rich in "fat-forming" elements of putrition. We should, if this view be correct, feed our horses, then, on Indian corn and oil-cake, rather than upon beans and oats.

An old primitive Methodist preacher who was going to preach in the little chapel at Bristol, got so wet that he had to borrow a pair of unmentionables from his host, who had but his everyday breeches at liberty, which, unknown to both, were occupied by a colony of ants. As the old gentleman warmed in the service, the ants got more and more lively, and very soon after he commenced his sermon the itch became intolerable, and no amount of scratching appeased it. Not knowing how to account for it, but finding it impossible to go on, he stopped and said: "My friends, I am sure I have got grace in my heart, but I believe the devil's in my breeches!"

The Use of Lemons.

When persons are feverish and thirsty beyond what is natural, indicated in some cases by a metallic taste in the mouth, especially after drinking water, or by a whitish appearance of the greater part of the surface of the tongue, one of the best "coolers," is to take a lemon, cut off the top, sprinkle over it some loaf sugar, working it down into the lemon with a spoon, and then suck it slowly, squeezing the lemon, and adding more sugar, as the acidity increases from being brought up from a lower point. Invalids with feverishness may take two or three lemons a day in this manner with most marked benefit, manifested by a sense of coolness, comfort and invigoration. A lemon or two thus taken at "teatime," is an entire substitute for the ordinary supper of summer, and would give many a man a comfortable night's sleep and an appetite for breakfast, to which they are strangers, who will have their cup of tea, or supper of "relish" and "cake," and berries and cream.

A cynical individual, on reading a pathetic story in one of the papers, lately, noted in his memorandum book as follows: "Something whistled. Teacher calls up a big boy on suspicion. Big boy comes up and holds out his hand, sullen and savage. Noble little boy comes manfully forward and says: 'I'm the boy that whistled, sir,' at the same time holding out his hand. Teacher simmers down, and lets them both off. Mem.—Noble little boy thought teacher wouldn't lick him if he told the truth, and he knew that the big boy would if he didn't."

Motto for railway directors—Never mind passengers; it is freight that makes the car-go.

"Clara," asked Tom, "what animal dropped from the clouds?" "The rain, dear," was the reply.

"Every moderate drinker could abandon the intoxicating cup if he would; every inebriate would if he could."—John B. Gough.

Let the youth who stands with a glass of liquor in his hand, consider which he had better throw away, the liquor or himself.

Why should a wood-cutter never be hungry? Because he can always have a chop by axing.
