TREADWELL & CO.

with the old standard

HARVESTING MACHINES

so popular with all California farmers, with all the latest improvements, and many new ones for the harvest of '72.

The Wood's Prize Mowers

THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

As a harvester, the Wood's Improved Mower is confessedly without an equal yet before this country. These machines have been improved since first introduced, until they are now almost entirely a new machine. It is made by Walter A. Wood, the largest manufacturer of Farming Machinery in the world—a man who keeps "up with the times," and who now builds and sells over twenty-five thousand of the World's Prize Mowers annually. It led the world at the Paris Exposition, and has found no peer since.

The Wood's Improved Prize Mower is especially adapted to Oregon. It has a folding (or jointed) bar with hand lever, two wheels, spring seat, and is made almost entirely of malleable iron, hard durable, and though compact and powerful, is of lighter draft than the other makes of equal weight. It is every way superior to any other, as every farmer will say who has one. And its price ($30) is from $15 to $25 less than is asked for an inferior machine. Farmers will not pay that difference? Investigate before you buy, and see if you are getting anything for that extra profit—for it is profit, as no Mower costs more to build than does Wood's. Send for a pamphlet before buying.

"Buy the Best."

Buy the Wood's Improved Prize Mower!

We offer also the

from 10 to 15 feet cut, improved by Walter A. Wood, having not only all the advantages of the old Illinois machine, but Wood's improvements, and also Donnan's Adjustable Reel.

No other Header has these improvements, and no other parties sell them. They are made especially for this coast, by Wood, at Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

The Kirby Self-Rake Reaper and Mower.

These machines are too well known to need description. Also the "KIRBY CLIPPER MOWER," price $75—the cheapest and for many purposes the best in the market.

A STORY OF A ROSE.—A rose with so pretty a little story as this, and so full of romance as this, ought to be beautiful, and so is the Cherokee Rose. Here is the story told of it: "An Indian chief of the Seminole tribe was taken prisoner by his enemies, the Cherokees, and doomed to torture, but fell so seriously ill that it became necessary to wait for his restoration to health before committing him to the fire. And as he lay prostrated by disease in the cabin of the Cherokee warrior, the daughter of the latter, a young dark-faced maid, was his nurse. She fell in love with the young chieftain, and, wishing to save his life, urged him to escape. But he would not do so unless she would flee with him. She consented. Yet, before they had gone far, impelled by soft regret at leaving home, she asked permission of her lover to return for the purpose of bearing away some memento of it. So, retracing her footsteps, she broke a sprig of white rose which climbed up the poles of her father's tent, and preserving it during her flight through the wilderness, planted it by the door of her new home in the land of the Seminoles. And from that day this beautiful flower has always been known between the keys of Florida, and throughout the Southern States, by the name of the Cherokee Rose."

A most extraordinary attempt to commit suicide is reported from Sherborne, England. A man employed as a fencer at Sherborne Castle was found by a woman, in her kitchen, sitting by the fire, with blood issuing from his mouth, blood being upon the floor, and neckerchief on fire. She asked him what he had done, and he replied that he had tried to blow his brains out. Assistance was immediately obtained, when the nozzle of a pair of bellows was found lying by his side. The old man said he had only half done it; his old head was too thick to blow. It seemed the would-be suicide had been carrying fuses and rock powder about him, and had drilled a hole in the nozzle of a bellows, converting it into a kind of small cannon, and inserting the end of it into his mouth. He had been addicted to drink, and had before threatened "to make a hole in the water."

A Glasgow professor has just discovered that a mass of ice placed upon a wire gauze, upon the application of slight pressure, will pass through the gauze, retaining its shape and nearly all its weight, and re-appear a solid mass on the other side. Another phase of this singular principle is that a wire, drawn across a mass of ice, hanging down and weighted at each end, will cut its way through the ice pretty rapidly, while the ice closes up behind it and offers as firm resistance to any attempt at cleavage where the wire went through as at any other point. How little we know of the property of things which are every day at our fingers' ends. A "look-beyond-the-end-of-your-nose club" is proposed; but, gracious heaven! who shall escape the fatal blackball?

They tell a droll story of a Colorado bar-keeper, whose customers complained that his liquor was weak and impotent. This stimulated his ingenuity, and he devised a compound mixture of pure spirits, poison oak and butternut, which agreeably surprised those who partook thereof; the first imbiber who tried it, fairly yelled with delight; the next took two drinks and turned a double summersault in the front of the store and finally a peddler under the influence of this extraordinary draught, actually stole his own pack, and hid it in the woods. The bar room has greatly risen in those parts, and its keeper is looked upon as a public benefactor.

The law of Ohio, which holds the liquor dealer responsible for the injury done by the drinker who is intoxicated, is wise in policy and right in principle. If you want a destructive Bible argument for it, you can find it in the Mosaic law, where the man who kept the goring ox, but who did not keep him confined, is held responsible for the damages done by the unruly beast. Exodus xxi: 28-39.

A Milwaukee man, ever since the Grand Duke's ball, carries his right hand behind his back shaking hands only with his left. The former is reserved exclusively for royalty.
