VARIOUS ITEMS.

The following is furnished the Salem Mercury by Mr. W. S. Smith, Principal of the Deaf Mute Institution located in that city: There are 54 deaf mutes in this State, and 14 in Washington Territory. Out of the whole number there are only 14 that are educated, or rather graduates of some public asylum. The next term commences on the first Monday in September. There are already 25 pupils engaged, and more will probably apply before the beginning of the session. Mrs. Lavina Kanuse, the former matron, a lady fully qualified for the place, will hold the same position during next term.

The school statistics of Coos county are as follows: Number of legal voters, 511; persons over 4 and under 20, 601; districts in the county, 15; school houses in the county 10; value of school houses, $2,590; scholars in average attendance, 156; amount paid teachers from taxes, $499 19; by subscription, $940 81; for incidental expenses, $10 14; taxes collected to March 5, 1872, $542; number of male teachers employed, 10; female, 3; average wages per month paid male teachers, $43; female teachers, $35.

Two Greeleyites have been found in Douglas county. They are both Democrats.

The bell for the Catholic Chapel has arrived at Baker City.

A Dallas young gentleman, while riding out with a young lady the other day, was politely informed that he was on the left side instead of the right. He attempted to correct the mistake by turning the buggy completely round and going the other way, says the Republican.

A young lady and gentleman of Salem, not of age, concluded to get married. Their tender age influenced their parents to refuse their consent. Undismayed the couple eloped. Arriving at Portland, a sober second thought prompted the young man to return and seek to gain his father's consent. He did so and succeeded. The consent of the young lady's parents was also secured, and both returning to Salem "with hearts so full of glee," a license was procured, the ceremony performed, and they now "rejoice."

A RECONSTRUCTED SOUTHERNER.—There is much blood between the Americans and English in Paris, growing out of the disputes between their respective countries. A stalwart American from the South, with an English friend and two women, had a private box at the last opera ball. During the progress of the festivities the two cavaliers got into a dispute over the Alabama claims, and finally, to the dismay of their fair companions, proposed to begin the war there at once. Early in the combat the American dealt his antagonist a terrible blow, which dislocated his shoulder. The women then shrieked and the guards burst in the door, while the victor coolly gave his arm to the disabled Briton, helped him into a carriage, and returned master of the field and of both the ladies. But, perhaps, the strangest part of the story is yet to be told. The American champion is not only a native of the South, but he was also the most violent of secessionists. He seems to be pretty well reconstructed, and the same may be said of most of the ex-rebels now in Paris.

An editor says that the only reason he knows of why his house was not blown away the other day during a severe gale was because there was a heavy mortgage upon it.

"Well, Lauchie, how are you?" "Man, I'm wonderin' weel considerin'."

"Considerin'—what?" "I did last night what I've no done this thirty year. I goed to bed pairtutly sober, and I'm thankin' to say I got up this mornin' not a bit the wuar."

HUMORS.

An ignorant oil-merchant, on being asked how large an advertisement he wanted in a certain newspaper, replied that they might "put in about three pints of type."

A New York editor thinks from the manner in which shirts are made in that city there ought to be an inspection of sewing. He says he went to the expense of a new shirt the other day and found himself when he awoke in the morning crawling out between two of the shortest stitches.

The Missouri Democrat avers that Horace Greeley is going to set out ten acres of cigar boxwood this Spring on his farm at Chappaqua. On two acres he intends to graft the government stamp. This variety will be a later than the plain kind, but much more valuable.

An Illinois editor sent to another, who had refused to exchange with him, a paper bearing this inscription: "Exchange or go to the —." The editor thus addressed replied: "I will do neither, for I don't want your paper in this world, nor your company in the next."

An editor relates how a colored barber made a dead-head of him. He offered him the usual dime for shaving, when the fellow drew himself up with considerable pomposity, and said: "I understand dat you is an editor."

"Well, what of it?" said he. "We neber charge editors nuffin."

"But, my woolly friend," we continued, "there are a good many editors traveling nowadays, and such liberality on your part will prove a ruinous business." "Oh! neber mind," remarked the barber; "we make it up off de gemmen."

The St. Louis (Missouri) Democrat, of the third ultimo, under the head "1811—1872," commences a column article with the following astonishing sentence: "Sixty-one years ago to-day the rumbling echo of an infantile caterwaul was heard among the granite hills of New Hampshire. The doctor said it was a boy, the nurse pronounced it a darling, and the world has since learned to be thankful that it was Horace Greeley."

PATENT GATE, ETC. Self-Opening and Self-Closing GATE. PATENTED BY JOHN DICKASON, June 4, 1867. THE GATE IS SO CONSTRUCTED That when the vehicle approaches it the wheels on one side pass over a lever which is connected to the gate hinge by a rod, thus opening the gate before you and fastening it open. After going through, the carriage passes over a similar lever, also connected with the gate hinge, causing the gate, in its rotation, to shut behind you and fasten. No Getting Out of Your Vehicle! No Raising of Latches Nor Pulling of Strings, Except the "ribbons" of your team. It is often called THE "LAZY MAN'S GATE," And a "Dead Open and Shut."

This gate is simple in its construction, both of iron and wood work, and not likely to get out of order. If a neat, cheap gate is desired, it may be made light, with three cross bars of wood and one-fourth inch wire, neatly curved at the top, the lower end hid in the bottom bar, which is the style of a factory made gate. The gates are now in practical use in several of the counties around San Francisco, and plenty of testimonials can be given. THOMAS J. SAFFORD, Having purchased the Right for Linn Co., Oregon, Has now on hand, and will manufacture the above described gate. Wherever it has been used it has received the highest encomiums, as the large number of certificates from prominent farmers in all parts of the country, now in my hands, will testify. CARRIAGES AND WAGONS, Of All Descriptions, On hand and manufactured to order. Blacksmithing and Repairing Done to order at most reasonable rates. Shop foot of Ferry street, opposite Beach, Montell & Co.'s flouring mill. THOMAS J. SAFFORD, Albany, Oct. 28, 1871-87-4
