HARVESTING MACHINES

so popular with all California farmers, with all the latest improvements, and many new ones for the harvest of '72.

The Wood's Prize Mowers

and Wood's Improved Self-Hake Reapers.

These machines are indubitably

THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

As a harvester, the Wood's Improved Prize Mower is confessedly without an equal yet before the country. These machines have been improved since first introduced, until they are now almost entirely a new machine. They are made by Walter A. Wood, the largest manufacturer of Farming Machinery in the world—a man who keeps "up with the times," and who now builds and sells over twenty-five thousand of the Wood's Prize Mowers annually. It led the world at the Paris Exposition, and has found no peer since.

The Wood's Improved Prize Mower is especially adapted to Oregon. It has a golding or polished bar with hand lever, two wheels, spring seat, and is made almost entirely of malleable iron, hard wood and steel. It is heavy, strong and durable, and though compact and powerful, is of lighter draft than the other machines of equal weight. It is every way just the Mower for Oregon, as every farmer will say who has one. An 18-inch gauge is from six to eight feet ahead of an interior machine. Farmers, will you pay that difference? Investigate before you buy, and see if you are getting anything for that extra profit. For it is profit, as no Mower costs more to build than does Wood's. Send for a pamphlet before buying.

"Buy the Best."

We offer also the

from 10 to 15 feet cut, improved by Walter A. Wood, having not only all the advantages of the old Haines machine, but Wood's improvements, and also Dunn's Adjustable Reel.

Let no other Header has these improvements, and no other parties sell them. They are made especially for this coast, by Wood, at Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

The Boy that Was Not Remarkable.

Most boys who "get into the newspaper" are very remarkable boys. Joe had nothing about his looks, or action, or color that attracted the particular attention of anybody.

When he first breathed the vital air he was simply a boy baby, with two hands, two feet, two eyes, two ears, one mouth, and one nose. He did not laugh and crow, and sit upright, as young geniuses do in their boyhood, but he slept, and waked, and ate (baby food, of course) and cried like any common baby.

When he grew older there was no uncommon developments, except that he was fat, and healthy, and heavy.

Nobody congratulated the mother on raising a future President, nor applauded the bright genius that sparkled in the baby's eyes. The gossipers looked wonderingly at each other as the tender mother watched over her baby boy, propped for his comforts, and pressed him to her warm bosom.

He grew to boyhood but he was only a common boy. He learned his A B C with difficulty, and was slow in learning to read. His teacher thought he never would "get through the multiplication table." But he never forgot it.

When the boys went a fishing Joe went too, but he was slow in getting his hook and line ready. The other boys were on and in and around the lake before his hook was fairly settled in the water. "Two slow to move," the boys would say. "He'll sit there expecting the fish to come to him." It was even so; he remained stationary and fixed; but when night came something his basket was always full, while many of the bright geniuses went home with the sad intelligence that the "fish wouldn't bite."

When he grew to be a man, the bustling drive-shends laughed at his plodding; but by some means he seldom made a mistake, and though he did not seem to accomplish as much in a week as many others did in a day, yet at the end of the year there was always something tangible in his results, while the work of those who seemed to utterly outstrip him at first ended in demolished air castles.

He has passed the meridian of life. Men eminent in the profession respect his judgment. Business men coming upon the stage of action long to learn the secret of his success. The bank leans upon him to carry it through the trying crisis; merchants and manufacturers lean upon him to save them from bankruptcy. Steady, constant, and hard study made him a scholar; persevering industry, accompanied with economy, raised him to opulence; close observation and deliberate reflection cultivated a sound judgment, and integrity secured for him the confidence of all who knew him.—Christian Advocate.

Steadily Trapped.

A girl, young and pretty, and above all gifted with an air of admirable candor, lately presented herself before a Parisian lawyer.

"Monsieur, I have come to consult you on a grave affair. I want you to oblige a man I love, to marry me in spite of himself. How shall I proceed?"

The gentleman of the bar had, of course, a sufficiently elastic conscience. He reflected a moment, and then, being sure that no one overheard him, replied hesitatingly:

"Mademoiselle, according to our law, you always possess the means of forcing a man to marry you. You must remain on three occasions alone with him; you can then go before a judge and swear that he is your lover."

"And that will suffice, Monsieur?"

"Yes, Mademoiselle, with one further consideration."

"Well?"

"Then, you will produce witnesses who will make oath to having seen you remain a good quarter of an hour with the individual said to have trilled with your affections."

"Very well, Monsieur, I will retain you as counsel in the management of this affair. Good day."

A few days afterwards the young lady returned. She was mysteriously revived by the lawyer, who scarcely gave her time to seal her self, and questioned her with the most lively curiosity.

"Capital, capital!"

"Persevere in your design, mademoiselle, but the next time you come to consult me, give me the name of the young man you are going to make so happy in spite of himself."

A fortnight afterwards, the young lady knocked at the door of the counsel's room. No sooner was she in than she flung herself into a chair, saying, that the walk had made her breathless. Her counsel tried to reassure her, made her inhale salts, and even proposed to unlodge her garments.

"It is useless, monsieur," she said. "I am much better."

"Well, now tell me the name of the fortunate mortal."

"Well, then, the fortunate mortal, be it known to you, is yourself," said the young beauty, bursting into a laugh. "I love you, and I have been here three times to seal my fate with you, and my four witnesses are below, ready and willing to accompany me to a magistrate," gravely continued the narrator.

The lawyer thus caught had the good sense not to get angry. The most singular fact of all is, that he adores his young wife who makes a most excellent house-keeper.

A goose in Maine has produced an egg a foot in circumference, and the proprietor proposes to retire that goose on half-day.

Traveling in Siberia.

Lovers of good sleighing can be satisfied to the full in Siberia, and have a range of thousands of miles without fear of a thaw or of bare ground. But it is very cold, and one must wear thick clothing to keep warm. I frequently saw the thermometer forty degrees below zero, and sometimes it gets below sixty. Everything that can be frozen becomes solid. We carried some soup, frozen into cakes like small bricks, and we had a piece of roast beef that looked and felt like red granite.

The horses used to become white in a short time no matter what their original color was; the hair round their nostrils used to be covered with frost from their breath, and sometimes they resounded the rows of spikes that farmers put around the noses of wandering calves. In the coldest morning there is generally a fog or frost-veil resting near the earth, from the freezing and falling of all the watery particles of the atmosphere. In the coldest nights the stars are very brilliant, and the brightest of them seem to burn like diamonds.

For my winter journey I had a suit of clothing made from a pair of blankets. On my feet I had my ordinary woolen socks then a pair of spiraled-skin socks, then some sheepskin stockings that came up to my knee, and then some boots of reindeer skin reaching as high up as boots could possibly go. My leather boots I packed away in my sleigh, and had no use for them while I was traveling.

Outside of my ordinary clothing I had a sheep-skin coat, with the fur inside, and buttoned around me; and outside of this I had a deer-skin coat that touched the ground when I stood erect, and was large enough inside for a man and a boy. Its collar was a foot wide, and when turned up in front, it completely concealed my head.

A REMEDY FOR THE HEADACHE.—Dr. Warburton Beattie (Edinburgh Medical Journal) advocates the use of turpentine in the severe headache to which nervous and hysterical women are subject. "There is, moreover," he says, "another class of sufferers from headache, and this is composed of both sexes, who may be relieved by turpentine. I refer to the frontal headache which is most apt to occur after prolonged mental effort, but may likewise be induced by unduly sustained physical exertion; what may be styled the headache of a fatigued brain. A cup of very strong tea often relieves this form of headache, but this remedy, with not a few, is perilous, for bringing relief from pain, it may produce general restlessness, and, worst of all, banish sleep. Turpentine, in doses of 20 or 30 minims, given at intervals of an hour or two, will not only remove the headache, but produce in a wonderful manner that soothing influence to which reference has already been made.

A Western editor, during the late frozen period, thus accounts for the death of local news in his paper: "Our reporter started out this afternoon in search of local items. After an unusually long absence he returned; but, alas! in a most deplorable condition—frozen stiff as a poker and minus one ear. We stood him up against the wall behind the stove, and ordered the devil to pile on the fuel. We finally succeeded in prying his mouth open with the ash shovel, when a dozen or so of words fell out upon the floor and broke into pieces. We set the devil at work putting the pieces together, and he busily repaired the following as the result of his labor: 'Solest day of the season; everything froze stiff; saloon keepers selling hot whiskies by the stick.'

A certain American physician named Strong, residing at Marsailles, France, is said to be making a reputation as a worker of wonderful cures. He gives nothing to his patients but pure water, which he magnetizes by a few passes of his hand; and it is said to be a curious sight to witness hundreds of persons of all conditions waiting their turn at his door, each with a pitcher or decanter of water. The number who call daily upon Mr. Strong are estimated at an average of nine hundred. The papers speak of the doctor's charity to people, but do not state how much of a fortune he is making by his novel process.

THE ARCTIC RAFT.—The Alaska Herald says: "The ingeniously constructed India rubber raft, on which Mr. Octavo Pavy proposes to travel in the Arctic waters, in search of the North Pole, is composed of four keel-shaped cylinders, fastened together on the decks by wooden slats, to which the necessary masts and rigging are attached. It was designed by the inventor as a life boat, to be carried on vessels used in case of fire or shipwreck. It is so small that it occupies very little room—in fact, Mr. Pavy carries his in a barrel. Such a raft cannot be capsize, and will float in the severest storm. It will carry about 10,000 pounds of freight besides the crew. Capt. Miles, who accompanies Mr. Pavy, has crossed the Atlantic in fourteen days on the same raft."

The Congressional Church at Ft. Scott, Kansas, recently completed a coat of about $12,000, was burned on March 15th. The next day 40 carpenters erected a building 32x50 feet, in which services were held on the 17th. On the 18th the pastor received this telegram: "Congregational Church, Lawrence, to Congregational Church Ft. Scott, greeting and $500!"

A Connecticut reporter says a boy swallowed three marbles and four bullets recently, and being somewhat of a bony structure, is now utilized by the neighbors, who borrow him as a rattle-box to amuse their babes and sucklings.
