

Republican Ticket for 1872

FOR PRESIDENT, U. S. GRANT.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT, HENRY WILSON.

Presidential Electors, A. B. MEACHAM, of Umatilla county. W. D. HARE, of Washington county. J. F. GAZLEY, of Douglas county.

Useless Big Men.

It is a glorious thing for a man to be very wise; to know a great deal of history and politics and philosophy, and become a perfect encyclopedia of facts about everything; but it is an evidence of very great weakness for such a man to become big-headed about his knowledge and assume airs of superiority over every body because of his wisdom. Great knowledge can afford to be natural and even humble, as it will speak for itself. To see a big man endeavoring to inflate his bigness is as contemptible and ridiculous as to see a little man trying to swell the dimensions of his littleness. Vanity and egotism are the bellows in both instances, and such blowing will surely burst the influence of the blowers. Charles Sumner is an egotistical big man. As a scholar he is naturally large, but how insufferable his scholarly airs. There was a time when he was esteemed a great statesman; but arrogance and self-admiration have so clouded his latter-day efforts as to render him an object of disgust to his old-time friends. Vanity is now his chief stock in trade. He has been honored by his fellow citizens with a seat in the United States Senate so long, that he has arrived at the conclusion that he is necessary to the existence of the Government; that when he dies a great calamity will transpire. Some one remarked to General Grant that Sumner was a disbeliever in the Bible. Grant quietly remarked that it was because he (Sumner) did not originate it. We have heard of persons who spent hours in idly gazing into a looking-glass in admiration of their physical beauty. Sumner every once in a while spends hours in listening to his own voice in the Senate, the utterances of which serve more to illustrate the supreme selfishness and vanity by which he is actuated, than to command the respect and confidence of his hearers. Selfishness is esteemed as a guiding virtue by him, and egotism puffs him into an enormous gas bag. We think he ought to superannuate; be put on the retired list. The country has no use for so much aristocratic, windy bigness.

Admit Him.

In 1870 the State Senate of Oregon, then Democratic, ejected Mr. A. M. Witham, who had been legally elected to a seat in that body, from the Senate, and admitted Mr. Strahan to his place. This was done in order to secure a requisite support for certain Democratic schemes desired to be put through. It was a high-handed act of injustice, as well as an evidence of shameless corruption. Some Democratic journals are quite concerned now lest the State Senate, now Republican, should see proper to correct that matter. If the facts are as we have read them, the incoming State Senate will prove recreant to its duty unless it does admit Mr. Witham to the seat from which he was so unjustly ejected.

Not Blacero.

To show how inconsistent Senator Sumner is in his assertions that General Grant is so wicked and dangerous a man, just let it be remembered that this same aristocratic scholarly ponderosity from Massachusetts, voted to give Grant the power to suspend the writ of habeas corpus at will. If he were really sincere in his estimate, how could he do that?

Our Neighbor Explains.

We have no inclination to do the editor of the Democrat any injustice. We desire to be fair and courteous in our editorial writings, and will not intentionally misrepresent the principles or record of any of the editorial fraternity. Not long since the Democrat in endeavoring to account for the recent Republican victory in this State, said that "falsehood, misrepresentation, bribery, intimidation, false promises, trickery," etc., were used in every county. This, if true, would not only indicate the most degraded state of morals in the Republican party, but would also cast a vile stigma upon that class of Democracy who saw proper to vote for any portion, or all of the Republican ticket. In answer to this imputation and stigma, we alluded to a rumor which we have heard several times since we came to Oregon, and which we believed to be correct, in the following language: "There was a time, we are informed, when he (Brown) blew the editorial bellows for a Republican organ in Iowa; but now his wind inflates a Democratic. Of course the motives which induced him to change were satisfactory to his sense of honor. If he were honest, what right has he to impugn the motives of Democrats in this State for changing? should he not give them as much credit for honesty as he claims for himself?" In the Democrat of last week, our neighbor, after indulging in some indignant threats, gives the following explanation:

When we were about nineteen years old we contributed local items for the Albia (Iowa) Union, a Republican paper, while we were at work as a printer in the office. At the same time the paper was edited by Geo. W. Yocum, Esq., whose name stood at the "gable-end" of the paper as political editor. Mr. Y. knew at that time that we were a Democrat as well as the REGISTER man knows that we profess to be one now.

The error we committed was in receiving the impression that he was the political editor of a Republican journal in Iowa, instead of the local editor. The inference would naturally follow, however, that if he were employed upon the editorial force of a Republican journal, it was because his sympathies and principles were in harmony, as localizing in the way of reporting conventions, speeches, etc., as every local editor knows, has much to do with illuminating partisan positions and principles. Morally, there is such a thing as becoming accessory to a thing by our position, or actions, though our sentiments may not harmonize with it. Our neighbor certainly became accessory to the spread of Republican truths, by granting the use of his brilliant pen and prolific imagination in rendering the local pages attractive. We cannot avoid the impression that it would have been much more creditable for him to have been a Republican then and to have changed since, than for him to have used his influence in the spread of that which he did not believe. We did not manufacture the report which has drawn this explanation from our neighbor, so it is not a "base fabrication." We do not care about having any of our friends branded as "infamous liars," so we remain mum on that, not telling how many funerals we might become accessory to should we be so indiscreet. They no doubt committed the same error that we did, supposing as a natural consequence that if he were employed as a writer by a Republican press that he must have been a Republican. As it regards journalistic courtesy, we take no pleasure in indulging in personalities. We never have alluded to the editor of the Democrat except in connection with some principle upon which we thought he occupied very inconsistent ground, and have never, we believe, resorted to abuse or slang. The Democrat, however, in its peculiar ideas of editorial courtesy, has seen proper in alluding to us to parade our profession of the ministry before his readers, as if there was an argument in that more potent than anything else he could use. In our journalistic career we expect to show up to the best of our ability the errors and inconsistencies of our adversaries, and if the contest grows hot, we will endeavor to keep cool and courteous, never doffing our "clerical coat."

Four More Years.

Senator Kelly was elected to the United States Senate two years ago. He has had ample time to show his adaptability to that position since then. The result must be anything but satisfactory to his partisan friends. The only qualification which he seems to possess is that of drawing his pay. This he understands effectually. So far as accomplishing anything for the good of the State is concerned, the records of Senatorial proceeding furnish nothing, we believe, to his credit. He is a worthless droté in the Senatorial hive. He is a massive wooden-man thoroughly seasoned in the grain. If any other state has his match in the Senate, then there are two dead-leads there, and one other State that has sent an individual to Washington to absorb Senatorial pay from Uncle Sam, without returning any equivalent. There are four more years of this worthless representation to be endured yet. We hope then a live, energetic, influential, talented man will be substituted in his place.

A political crisis is apparently approaching in France. A complete rupture has broken out between the Right in the Assembly and Thiers' members. The Right to the number of 350 interviewed Thiers, and expressed great irritation at his attitude. They resolved to withdraw from his support during the session.

Our Next Legislature.

The next Oregon Legislature will convene at Salem in September next, and politically will stand as follows. Democrats marked thus *:
