The Progress of the Times.

bases of these are wise and equita- sult will be far more glorious in its b'e laws faithfully administered and influence upon American civilizaobeyed. These can never exist tion where there is not a clear and enlightened comprehension of human desire, and a willingness to confer every favor and privilege that, in the same relation, it would ask. This latter we denominate benevolence sometimes, sometimes virtue; hence we say of a republic, virtue possessed and practiced by among the people. Mistakes were made, such as the practice of reli-

that it is strong and substantial in proportion to the intelligence and the people. Guided by these ideas, the fathers of our Republic favored every enterprise that seemed to hold out a promise of increasing intelligence and promoting virtue gious intolerance, the establishment of human bondage, and in other directions; but increased enlightenment and experience demonstrated their evil character, and the determined progress of mind towards a more perfect standard of right and duty, first modified and then destroyed their existence. The opinion that detereoration in mind and morals is the character of American progress, will not stand the test of close scratiny. One need but glance over the remarkable political events which have transpired within the last dozen years in our country, to prove that the progress of the nation has been towards increased enlightenment and virtue. ### Cheering to Republicans.

If the opposition can gather any comfort from the election in North Carolina they are certainly welcome to it. To the Republicans it is a source of goodly cheer. They remember that two years ago the State went Democratic by nearly five thousand They don't forget that every effort, which Democratic ingenuity and strategy could bring to bear, was used to earry the election. Even tricks of the most improved Tammany stripe, were projected; but in spite of all these, white Republicans stood manfully to their duty, and the colored citizens rallied around the Republican standard as faithfully and fearlessly as their regiments did around the old flag upon many bloody battle fields in the South. It demonstrates the sterling integrity of the colored citizen. It shows that neither persuasion nor threats will wean him away from the Republican party. Ir it he beholds his best friend ards. Carl Schurz has been equally, if not more disagreeable to the party in this particto Sumner, Trumbull and the rest. It is better to have an individual out of the household as an open enemy, or opposer, than in the family as an element of discord, and peevish unrest. There is one thing evident: No party can succeed with such discordant elements in the lead. Even now they scarcely to'erate each other, and one success would burst them into belligerant fragments. We verily believe the Republican party is better off without them, and we think the coming election will show it.

In Enruest.

The Democratic Executive Committee have issued a vigorous circular to Democrats, urging them to immediate organization, so as to be ready to give an earnest and hearty support to the principles of the party, as they will be proclaimed by the September Convention at Louisville. The Committee says that an utter abandonment of principle is evinced by the coalition of spoilsmen and place-hunters in their attempt to elevate Greeley to the Presidency. They say there is evidence of corruption, bargain, fraud and base hypocrisy. It must be repudiated and spurned by every man who has a spark of honesty in his heart. There are hundreds of thousands who already proclaim their purpose of maintaining the Democratic organization at all haza recommendation for the immediate appointment in every county of a a district committee, and that Congressional Conventions shall be assembled on or before the 25th of Angust, to select two delegates and two alternates from each district, that a full delegation from each State shall be present on the 3d of September. It must be becoming more apparent to the eves of the Chappaquacks every day that Greeley stock is on the decline. It is offrequent occurrence to read of leading Democrats tions of the country, uttering their outspoken in their declarations of opposition. Since the principles of the Democratic party have been ignored, given up, slaughtered, they feel under no obligations to go with the slaughterers; but propose to act in the future in consonance with and consistency.

Now that the Democrats are fully satisfied that North Carolina has gone Republican, they try to console themselves by saying that the election was carried by "frauds." It will be granted that there is no party more thoroughly qualified from experience to teil what a fraud is than it as the historic chain of that party is linked with them; but because that propensity constitutes so large an element in its identity, it is no just reason why it should Five hundred thousand brick charge the evil upon its betters. intoxicated but himself.
