

SEWING MACHINES.

THE Finkle AND Lyon

SEWING MACHINE
Is beyond question more perfect for All Kinds of Work, than any other machine in use. It is a combination of Stumplicity, Durability & Economy, manufactured of the very best imported steel. The

FINKLE & LYON VICTOR
Is unequalled for quietness and ease of running, self-setting needle, perfect shuttle. Its operation is positive, enabling it to Run Over Seams and Turn Corners without changing the tension, length of stitch, or stopping the motion of the machine. Will sew any kind of material cut with straight and bias edge,

WITHOUT BASTING, entirely preventing the fullness of either side. It has a more perfect feed than any other machine. Takes all the stretch from the goods, operating with equal facility on the heaviest as well as the lightest fabric, leaving a seam alike on both sides, beautifully smooth, strong and elastic; is especially adapted to the diversified uses of Family Sewing, and is so simple in its construction that it can be used with accuracy by the most inexperienced.

Especially adapted to Tailoring and Leather Work!

It will hem, fell, tuck, gather and sew upon a band at the same time, which obviates the tedious necessity of basting. It will do any kind of work done on a sewing machine, with less changing and adjusting than any other machine ever presented to the public. It will

BRAID UPON MUSLIN or WOOLEN GOODS, in a manner far superior to any other machine.

Parties wishing to purchase a machine are invited to call at the Register Building on corner of First and Ferry streets, Albany, Oregon, and examine the $40 and $45.

SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW
THE BANNER
Shuttle Sewing Machine,
With Table and Treadle Complete.

Stitch alike on both sides of the cloth, and cannot be unraveled.
500,000 stitches a minute, without noise, skipping of stitches, or breaking of thread.

First Introduced in June, 1870.
Patented in the United States and all the principal countries of Europe.

The new BANNER SHUTTLE SEWING MACHINE is sold for $5 less than any other first class sewing machine, and is guaranteed to be built in a more substantial manner, to have less working parts, run at a greater speed, to make less noise, to be more beautifully finished, to miss less stitches, and do a greater variety and better quality of work than any machine made in the United States, either high or low price. All of its working parts are made of the best refined steel, every part made to a gauge and interchangeable. It uses needles, thread, silk and linen of any size, and works with equal facility on the thickest woolsens or thinnest muslin. It will hem, fell, tuck, blind, cord, ruffle, blind, plait, quilt, stitch, seam, gather, hem-stitch and embroider in the most perfect and beautiful manner. No skill required to "set" a needle, as every needle is so made that it is impossible to put one in and get it wrong. Every machine is warranted for five years. Call at Register Building and see it.

What Happened to a Good Little Boy.

There lived once a planter
With a son, his only liv,
To whom, upon his birthday,
A bran new ax he giv.

This farmer had a gard'ing,
All filled with appel trees,
Which for the city mar-ki-et
He was try'ng for to rail-ese.

The son he takes the hatch-et
Quite jolly and jocund,
And, going to the appel trees,
He chops them to the gr'und.

The farmer called his ser-vi-ents,
And ranged them in a row:
"Now who has chopped my appel
trees,
And killed them root and bo?"

The servants stand ama-zied,
All drawn up in a line;
There comes a running up to him
His young and hopeful se'n.

"I cannot tell a lie, poppar,"
This truthful boy began,
"Twas I who chopped your appel
trees—
"Twas I, your little son."

Now, who you s'pose this buffer was
And who his filial kin?
It was the immortal Bushrod,
And the late G. Washington.

MORAL.
Now who takes a hatch-et,
And appel trees cuts down,
If he lives long enough, will be
A great and pious moun.

From the Oregonian of Nov. 9th we take the following in regard to the Stage Robbers:

This morning the four persons tried, convicted and sentenced in the United States District Court for robbing the stage and mails in Antelope Canyon, last July, namely: Thompkins, Bramlette, White and Hanson, will be taken to Salem. In accordance with the sentence, these men will be confined in the State Penitentiary for life. To the very last the prisoners assert their innocence of the crime for which they are condemned. Bramlette states that he was taken into the woods after his arrest and compelled to dismount by a revolver being placed at his head. His arms were then pinioned, a noose placed around his neck, and he drawn three times from the earth and allowed to hang until nearly strangled, under threats from his captors that they would hang him until he was dead, unless he confessed to the crime; that after being nearly choked to death, had confessed to the robbery of the stage, and at the instance of the captors, admitted that Thompkins, Hanson and White, were also engaged in the robbery; that when he (Bramlette) was allowed to remount his horse and ride away from the spot, he emphatically denied every statement which he had made in his confessions. He repeated that it was extorted from him under threats of death, but that there was not one word of the confession true. Hanson and White both stated that they were innocent of the crime. They did not know, either of them, the charge on which they were arrested until taken to the house. The parties making the arrest stated all along that it was for stealing horses. Hanson said that one of the principal parties who figured in the whole case, had offered him one hundred dollars if he would escape, but that he (Hanson) had refused the offer. Hanson also stated that he only desired to live long enough to see the whole matter cleared up, and to recover his name from the odium which attached to it by reason of his complicity in the matter. He proposed to meet his fate like a man, and to labor hard and faithfully while he was kept confined; he had never yet stolen anything in his life, and his conscience was perfectly clear on that score. All the three prisoners had no fault to find with either the Judge or jury. They expressed entire satisfaction with the manner in which the case had been managed from the commencement to the ending; they had had as fair and impartial a trial as they could reasonably expect under the circumstances. Considering the heavy sentence, the prisoners appeared calm and resigned to their hard hopeless lot. Each expressed a hope that the mystery surrounding the case would at last be unravelled, and the guilty parties brought to condign punishment, for the grave crime which they were called upon to suffer.
