

Albany Register.

LOCAL MATTERS.

CAUGHT.—Sheriff Parker reached this city Wednesday noon, after an absence of ten days, during which time he was engaged in "trailing" Levi Livingston, indicted at the October term of Linn County Circuit Court for counterfeiting. Mr. Parker visited Seattle and other points on the Sound during his "run." He succeeded in capturing Livingston on Saturday last, just back of Tacoma. It is charged that Livingston was engaged, prior to October last, in manufacturing and issuing counterfeit half dollars.

MEDICAL.—The Medical Society of the Third Judicial District will meet at Salem on Tuesday, March 4th. Sessions will be held in both forenoon and afternoon. In the evening the Medical College commencement exercises will transpire, after which a splendid supper prepared for M. D.'s and their friends, will be partaken of. All the physicians in the State, that can possibly attend, are invited and expected.

BUSINESS CHANGE.—The health of Mr. A. C. Layton failing him, he has withdrawn from business entirely, leaving Mr. W. C. Tweedale sole proprietor of the grocer and provision establishment on First street, next door above the Bank. With a heavy stock of goods on counters and shelves, which he will sell at lowest possible rates, Billy, with his obliging disposition and desire to do the fair thing by all customers, will soon be the popular grocer of the city. See card on third page.

THE COTTAGE MONTHLY.—For January is on our table, and deserves careful reading and hearty commendation. Its well chosen stories are selected from our best publications, and we are surprised and glad to note that a magazine so low priced, can furnish such excellent matter. Its price—only 50 cents per year—places it within the reach of every schoolboy, and the money paid for this monthly is well spent. Address Reade, Brewster, & Co., 142 LaSalle Street, Chicago.

UNFAVORABLE.—A telegram was received here the first of the week from Mr. J. L. Harris at Dalles, stating that his wife was worse, and requesting her father, Mr. Bell, of Lebanon, to come to Dalles at once. Mr. Bell took the noon train on Monday, and in all probability arrived at Dalles on Tuesday evening.

FRUIT.—The prospect for a full yield of fruit seems to be generally considered good throughout the county. The cherry crop, from present indications, will be more than an average one; the apple crop, an average one. Peaches, also, look well, but they are not a sure crop.

CURE FOR EPIZOOTIC.—The Secretary of War has directed the officers of the Quartermaster's Department to use a solution of one tea-spoonful of chlorate of potash in a bucket of water as a remedy for horses affected with the epizootic; one-fourth of this quantity to be given twice a day.

DEER WANTED.—Dr. O. P. S. Plummer wishes to purchase a pair of white-tailed deer, two female black-tailed deer, and the skeleton of a white-tailed deer—that of a buck preferred. Any one interested should read the card elsewhere in this issue.

CLOTHING.—Mr. N. Baum starts for San Francisco the first of the coming month, to lay in a new stock of Spring and Summer clothing, etc. The latest and most stylish "rigs" may be expected on his shelves upon his return.

VERY LOW.—Mr. Wallace Manzey, an attaché of this office, left this city for Salem, on the noon train Tuesday, having received a telegram stating that his father was lying dangerously ill, in that city, of consumption.

ALBANY & SANTIAM CANAL.—Capt. Smith has completed his survey of the Albany & Santiam Canal, and made his report to the Directors.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE CANAL.—Elsewhere we mentioned the fact that the survey of the Albany & Santiam Canal was completed, and a profile map thereof placed in the hands of the Directors of the Company on Wednesday. Capt. Smith has done his work faithfully and well, leaving nothing more in the line of engineering or surveying to be asked for at his hands. The survey commences near Wm. Gore's residence where Mr. Morris' contract ends, (whose contract, by the way, embraced all the deep cutting on the whole line of canal), probably one mile and a half from the Santiam river, and runs to James Elkins' barn, something over a half a mile south of the Court House in this city—a distance between the termini of eleven miles, or 112,231 yards. The deepest cut is a fraction over 7 feet. In crossing one or more sloughs probably some fluming will have to be done, but not a great amount. The estimated cost of digging the Canal is $16,854 65, which, added to the portion already under contract, would swell the amount to near $25,000. To this must be added the cost of headgates, widening the Canal from Elkins Bro.'s mills to the Santiam river, the cost of conveying the water through this city to an outlet in the Calipooia or Willamette, and the erection of a reservoir somewhere in the rear of the city. These figures may be too high—but should the work of digging and completing the Canal for business cost $75,000, it will be the cheapest and best paying investment for our people that can be undertaken at this time.

FROM CROOKED RIVER.—Mr. Abe Hackleman arrived home from his stock ranch on Crooked river, at the upper or eastern end of Ochoco valley, on Sunday, having made the trip via Dalles in eight days. It is two hundred miles from his ranch to Dalles, and between forty and forty-five miles south of east of Camp Watson. He reports a light winter in that country, and cattle beef-fat, and plenty of them. No sign of Indians. Mr. Hackleman thinks the country better adapted, if any difference, to raising horses than cattle, and has already invested to some extent in them. He reports old Linn countyites now residing there as generally doing well and pleased with the situation.

UNPRETTY.—A mixture of wall and grumble and fret is just now effusing from the brains of "ink-slingers" relative to item and editorial pectulations. Such business can be regarded as no better than unwrong and the perpetrators as wrongers. The guilty should do more right or else never write more. To ask credit and give none is altogether too "taking"—it is immensely porkish, with a thiev before the ish. Such an one desires to appear to his readers for what he is not instead of not he is what. To his readers for a time he may look like a lion, but a closer scrutiny will reveal the ears, and even if they are hid, the voice will proclaim the ass.

SOME HOG.—Mr. Wm. Gore, of Lebanon, brought a porker to this city on Wednesday that weighed 650 pounds net. Forty-one dollars and eighty-three cents, we believe, was paid him for the porker.

WASHING MACHINE.—A new patent washing machine now being offered for sale in this city, is an improvement—certainly saves much labor. The price seems to be the only objection to it.

FRANKLIN MARKET.—Mr. J. R. Herren still offers to customers the choicest steaks at the old stand. Doc. is a most accommodating butcher, and deserves well of a discriminating public. See card in this issue.

DISCONTINUED.—The office of the W. U. Telegraph Company, at Corvallis, was permanently closed on Monday last. We suppose the wire will be taken down.

ST. VALENTINE'S BALL.—The ball on the evening of the 14th inst. passed off pleasantly. There were twenty-seven couples in attendance, we learn.

ELEGANT.—The new furniture at Chas. Menley's. Call and see it.

PARAGRAMLETS.—No Change in market quotations since our last.

An Interesting Reminiscence.

The correspondent of the San Francisco Call recalls the following anecdote of the late Senator E. D. Baker, of Oregon:

During the Fremont Presidential campaign, and not far from Downsville, there was an exceedingly rough mining settlement of some five hundred people, and among those only one Republican was known to exist. All the rest were Democrats, and the majority of them of a very rude character. Baker determined to go there and make a Republican speech, though he had been strongly advised not to do so, as it would be dangerous. But the mighty orator was never afraid of the forbidding faces of men. He knew how to wake the latent divinity within the savages of human souls. He accordingly went; and not without some misgivings, I accompanied him. When we were entering the village the crowd about the "Bascom's grocery" of the place halted down the American flag, in token of hostility and disrespect, but offered no further personal indignity.

Baker did not seem to observe the flag episode, and after dark he mounted a carpenter's bench in front of one of the vilest grog-shops of civilization, and commenced. The rough audience had heard of him, and though a detested "black Republican," they wanted to hear him go. Not a word was spoken in the crowd; not a sign of applause or disapproval; and never did orator address an audience so unsympathetic and stolid—seemingly. Baker kept on half an hour or so without any perceptible effect; and then seemingly to be gathering all his energies for one gigantic blow to split the obdurate rock, he began to pace back and forth along the bench, pouring out wave after wave, cumulative, majestic and overwhelming. At length something like a tremor ran through the obstinately silent throng, and I could see them move uneasily under the terrible spell of the enchanter. Some of them had belonged to Riley's Regiment in the Mexican war. Baker knew that, and looked up at the unadorned flag-staff, he referred to his own participation in the battles in Mexico, and then for full ten minutes, and as it appeared, without a period in the structure of his speech, he rolled down a torrent of impassioned eloquence upon his transfixed audience—

"Like the dashing, silver-splashing Surges of San Salvador—"

The orator standing in the majesty of his power, piling it up higher and higher, and louder and louder, until some one in the crowd gave a sort of agonizing yell, as though unable to stand it any longer—and the stubborn rock was cleft for the outflow of the waters. The men yelled continuously. I do not know for how long, and made a rush upon the frail platform; Baker and his bench were overthrown, and it was several minutes before the triumphant orator could be heard and go on with his speech. I never saw a crowd behave so frantically from similar emotions. It was another scene like D'Arcy Magee's description of St. Patrick's conquest of the Irish on the Hill of Tara; and there, as of old, the Irish heart, though hidden in a rough tabernacle, showed its inability to resist the influence of true eloquence. At the election, a month after, the lone Republican of the bar was reinforced by eighty votes; and ever after, when Baker passed that way, he was cheered by the Irish miners at their work.

Uncle Jerry Driggs says the Sound country is the most delightful in the world.
