The Tribune learns from Mr. Ezra M. Meeker, the celebrated Puyallup hop-grower, that his crop this year will be 20,000 pounds at least. Last year he raised 14,000 pounds, and, as good prices ruled the market, he realized $6,000 for his labor and investment.

A three-year old son of Mr. George Small, living on the Touchet, Walla Walla county, was drowned in a ditch near his father's residence on Sunday, the 6th inst.

The Marysville (Cal.) Appeal of the 11th inst. has the following: A party, consisting of four families, and numbering about 30 persons, old and young, arrived here a few days ago from North Carolina, en route to Oregon. This party started from their old homes in North Carolina with a view of settling in Kansas, but on reaching that State were not pleased with the country and pushed on toward Oregon. They stopped over one day here for the purpose of looking about, but meeting no flattering offers in so short a time they resolved to push on to the Webfoot country.

The Boise City Statesman speaks thus of rabbits in that vicinity: "These long eared birds are said to be very thick on the other side of Boise river. They live and breed in the sagebrush, forage on the grain fields, and come down to the river in the middle of the day for water. It affords a nice opportunity to kill them. Mr. Frost, eighteen miles below here, says the rabbits have destroyed fifteen acres of grain for him, and many others make similar complaints. Mr. W. L. Thurman says his little boys killed 1,000 last week, and they don't think it much of a killing after all, for the rabbits seem to be about as plenty as ever. Two boys will shoot from 175 to 200 a day. When they get tired of shooting they lay down their guns and go to pelting them to death with stones as they pass by for water. This is a pretty good rabbit story, but a true one."

A correspondent of the Red Rock Democrat says: On June 29th Union and vicinity was visited by the heaviest rain and hail storm ever known in this valley. It commenced at 2 o'clock and in less than 30 minutes the whole face of the country was a lake of water. A water-spout burst on the hills directly north of the farms of Mrs. Cates and Mrs. D. R. Benson, and about two miles east of Union, and the whole face of the hill was one grand roaring cataract from summit to base, the water in some of the gulches being six feet deep; washing hundreds of tons of stone down into the road and fields below, many of which would weigh from 300 to 500 pounds, and two or three have been estimated at 1,000 to 1,500 pounds. It ruined Mr. Benson's garden and uprooted some of his apple trees; washed down and carried away nearly a half mile of fence on the Lawrence ranch, and ruined what grain chanced to be in its way. The hail stones were not large, but in some places they fell very thick, and where they were washed in drifts they may be found to the depth of six inches.
