The Pendleton Tribune says: "While hundreds of cattle have died during the past winter, because of the unusual severity of the weather, sheep not only have not died to any great extent, but are actually in a thriving condition. Sheep can live on much less than cattle; their wool keeps them warm and shields them from the cold winds of winter, and when snow covers the ground they paw it off the grass and live well where a bovine would starve. We would prefer sheep all the time to cattle, were it not that they are liable to contract certain infectious diseases which decimate the flock in a very short time. Unatilla county, however, is considered very healthy for sheep; and the general success which has thus far attended sheep raisers proves this opinion to be well founded."

SENATOR SUMNER'S COFFIN.—The Philadelphia Record gives the following description of the coffin forwarded to Washington from that city for the reception of the remains of the late Senator Sumner: "It is nearly square, and made of a species of wood said to be more durable than any metal. The side panels are covered with black cloth. The handles, of which there are eight, are of solid silver. They represent two hands grasping a rod about eighteen inches long. The lid is of two parts, or panels, and made of French crystal-plate glass. Two panels of cloth are made so as to cover the glass when required. The entire casket is surrounded by a massive molding of silver. The inside is upholstered with white satin, silk, and Venetian lace, heavy silken tassels drooping from each corner. The casket is six feet four inches in length, four handles, above described, being on each side."
