General News.

A miner who had been credited by store keepers at Cassiar, sold his claim a few days ago, and tried to leave the country without discharging his liabilities. One of the store-keepers espied him as he was preparing to cross Deas Lake in a boat, and jumped into the water and laid hold of the fugitive and held him till he discharged the amount of the claim. Others of his victims got out a capius and a constable is now hunting the debtor through the mountains of the frigid zone.

Letters received at Victoria from Cassiar give a most discouraging account of matters there. Ruth Brus have abandoned the claim they took up last fall on Deas creek, and some of the claims taken up early in the spring are also deserted. About $6,000 in gold dust came down on the Otter—$700 by express and the remainder in the hands of miners and Mr. McLeod, the packer. It has become painfully evident that the area of this gold field is limited, which fact, added to the high price of provisions and the shortness of the season, will cause a light yield of the precious metal.

In coming out from Deas creek, Mr. McLeod, the well known packer, nearly fell a victim to highwaymen. He left the creek early in the morning, crossed the lake in a boat, and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon jumped on his horse at the head of the lake and rode out on the trail towards Stikine river. When he had made fourteen miles and was descending a sidehill grade, he saw two men, with faces blackened, standing under a tree about 100 feet distant, each with a pistol in his hand. Mr. McLeod instantly put spurs to his horse and dashed on. The men ran towards the trail to head him off, but he passed beyond their reach before they gained the trail.

Mr. Robert N. Williams has bought Dr. McCarty's interest in the Connor's Creek Mine and quartz mill owned by Messrs. Hoover & McCarty, paying $3,500 for one half interest over and above all debts and liabilities on the mine and mill! This was a cash sale. Mr. Williams is a practical quartz man, and knows what he is about.

Lot J. Livermore, Esq., of Pendleton informs us that on the 8th inst., while Mr. H. C. Stewart, of Birch Creek, was hunting near the Umatilla river, he fell over a cliff opposite Cape Horn, and was instantly killed by the fall, being literally dashed to pieces. The cause of his fall is unknown, as no one was with him.

Theodore Tilton's parents refuse to believe in Mrs. Tilton's guilt until she confesses to them. They also express undiminished faith in their son, and indignantly deny the story of hereditary insanity in the family.

Tilton is about to commence suit against Henry Ward Beecher for damages of $10,000. He will be brought in the Supreme Court, and will be for criminal connection with Mrs. Tilton.
