Is this the wind, the soft sea wind That sorred thy locks of brown? Are these the rocks whose mosses knew The trail of thy light gown Where boy and girl sat down?

I see the gray fort's broken wall, The beat that rocks below; And, out at sea, the passing sails We saw so long ago, Rose-red in morning's glow.

The freshness of the early time On every breeze is blown;
As glad the sea, as blue the sky—
The change is ours alone;
The saddest is my own!

A stranger now, a world-worn man Is he who bears my name; But thou, methiuke, whose mortal life Immortal youth became, Art evermore the same.

Thou art not here, thou art not there, Thy place I cannot see; I only know that where thou art The blessed angels be, And heaven is glad for thee.

Forgive me if the evil years Have left on me their sign; Wash out, O soul so beautiful, The many stains of mine In tears of love divine!

Obsturn to me that dearest face Of all thy sea-born town, he wedded roses of thy lips, Thy loose hair rippling down in waves of golden brown!

Look forth once more through space and time And let thy sweet shade fall in tenderest grace of soul and form On memory's freecoed wall, A shadow, and yet all?

Draw near, more near, forever dear?
Where'er I restor roam,
Or in the crowded city streets,
Or by the brown sea foam,
The thought of thee is home!

"Well, Love, my poor child," said a dignified old gentleman, "I have looked your matters all over, and I must say I see nothing but starvation, before you and your family.' "Well, father," replied a bright little woman of twenty-five years, in a trembling voice, " I've not the least idea of starving, nor of letting my family starve -not if God spares my health,

"You were always a brave child, Love, but this is a terrible crisis. It would be cruel in any one to taunt you now, but remember that I told you and George that it was very imprudent for a man to marry till he had something ahead for an emergency.' "I remember, father, that you thought I should be wiser to marry a man with a house and store, for whom I did not care, than to marry George, with two thousand a year. But if I had the choice to make over again to-day, I should do just as I did then. I wouldn't change places with any woman on earth,

"You are a faithful wife and a brave little woman, Love, but-" But what, father?" "You can't live on in this way,

"But I will live, father, and live well, too, and take eare of George and the babies."

"How?" Ay, that was the word that had been ringing in the heart of this brave little woman ever since the day that her husband failed at his desk, and was brought home apparently dying. She knew that she could rear the pillars of her domestic structure herself, but

and-if it were only for you and the babies, I should say at once come home, and be as welcome there as you were four years ago; but you know the house is so small we haven't room in it."

Love smiled a sad smile, and then said, perhaps a little provokingly, "Four of us would occupy no more chambers than three; the babies are too little to be away from us at night. But if your house were twice as large, father, I could not take my husband's own little home away from him, now that he is sick. I shall have to decide soon, and will let you know my plans."

The respectable old gentleman rose up, and with his handkerclief polished his already shining beaver, kissed Love. patted the heads of the babies, and turned to go, saying, "Keep up a good heart, child, and remember that the ravens fed Elijah."
"Well, I don't want them to fee. me;

I prefer to feed myself," replied the punky little woman, who felt that it was rather hard in her father to discourage her, and then exhort her to "keep up a good heart."

She loved the old man, although he was stiff and narrow in his views, and never forgot any slight offered his judgment. She followed him to the door, and said, "Good-by, father; give my leve to mother," although the real mother, who would have found room enough in her heart and home for them all, had been for years in the grave.

It was twilight, and as the old gentleman was going down the steps a young man came up.

"Ah, good-eyening, good-evening,"
said the stout, good-natured hotel-keeper to both, and then added to Love,
"Here I am on the old borrowing business. My wife says she can't please the lawyers in court time since you and she changed pickles and honey. Old Squire Watts called out the minute he sat down to supper, 'Come, Bruce, bor-row some of that neighbor's pickles for us.' Them pickles is a standin' joke among them. Why can't nobody in town make pickles and catsup and chowchow like yourn? My wife's a cook that can t be beat on bread and meats and pastry and cake, but she ought to prentice herself to you on some things."

"Suppose we make a bargain, Mrs. Bart. I'll buy two barrels at the best Boston price, if you'll make them for me, and chow-chow and catsup too." Love laughed, and the hotel-keeper went down with her to get the jar. The old man went down the street, whispering, with a sigh, "The Lord knows what's going to feed that family; I can't do it, for wife says I can't; and she knows everything most; and Love is terribly obstinate."

Of course there were sick, and lame, and blind, and deaf people, and beggars pienty in the world, but Heaven was keeping them out of her sight that day, and bringing before her only happy grown folks and merry little ones. The streets looked so clean and the air seemed so pure that she charged herself with having often borne false witness against the beautiful, as she ran with light heart through Washington, Tremont and Court streets, and Bowdoin square first, to a store and then to the hotel. In each place she asked for the proprietor or the steward, and opening her basket, drew out three little glass jars of what the hctel-keeper at home had called "sour things." In one minute she told her business and the necessity that brought her out on it. Her cheerful face, her prompt manner, and her well-chosen words gained the victory for her. She went back at night pledged to supply home-made pickles, chow-chow and catsup for three hotels and five large groceries, and she whispered as she mounted the steps of her little home, "I'll show father any opportunity for previous prepara-tion. In the course of his remarks he drew out the following sentence, which has ever since been admired as one of most harmonious and expressive in the language. He was speaking of our militia conflict with Great Britain: "Our fathers raised their flag against a power to which, for the purpose of foreign conquest and subjugation, Rome, in the height of her glory, is not to be com-pared; a power which has dotted over possessions and military posts, whose morning drumbeat, following the sun in its course, and keeping pace with the hours, circles the earth with one continuous and unbroken strain of the martial air of England." As he sat down one of the Senators congratulated him upon his speech, and alluding to the above passage, said that to him it is an advertisement of your Golden Medical. the above passage, said that to him it was inconceivable, how Mr. webster, in a speech so manifestly unpremeditated, could have formed so perfect and so beautiful a sentence, which with hours of study he could not improve. Mr. Webster replied that the passage was not extemporaneous; that in his summer vacation he had visited, Quebec, and while standing upon the massive and almost impregnable citadel idea occurred to his mind. He immediately took his seat upon a gun, and with pencil and paper, sketched the thought in the most appropriate lan-guage he could at the moment command. Upon arriving at his hotel he sat down at his leisure and wrote it and re-wrote it, with many interlineations and erasures, until he had molded it into the form of words which satisfied him. He then laid it aside in his retentive memory to be used when the occasion should offer. The opportunity arose upon that day.

[From the Farm and Fireside.]

"Herewith we present an illustration of a most useful little machine, designed to serve several useful purposes in the kitchen, such as chopping satisage meat, pie meat, hash, fish, fruit and vegetables. A glance at the cut will give the reader a general idea as to the mode of operating the machine. Being compact, it takes but little space, and can be used on a kitchen table, taking about the same space as an ordinary chopping tray. The American Meat and Vegetable Chopper has been long enough before the public to be thoroughly tested, and the volume of praise that has been bestowed on it from various sources must convince all that this invention is almost a necessity in every family. This chopper is made in larger sizes for the use of butchers, and these have also become very popular."

These choppers are made in seven different sizes—four sizes for Family use and three sizes for Butchers—and are sold by the principal dealers in Hardware. House Furnishing Goods, and Agricultural Imelements throughout the country.
