

WHAT I LIVE FOR.

I live for those who love me, For those who know me true, For the heaven that lies above me, And the earth that lies below me...

IS IT A GHOST?

BY A BARRISTER.

The incident I am about to relate occurred many and many a year ago, in the time of the old "Charles" (or watch-dog) and the "hells" (gunning-boats) flourished at the West End.

George Marley, having none but fashionable vices, was not what the world calls vicious. He drank without being a sot, gambled without being a blackleg, and if not a miser, was a miser.

Young Giraud was perfectly acquainted with the city and its ways, and was nothing loth to place his knowledge at his friend's disposal.

It was true; the Frenchman had lost again. "Come, George," he said, with a forced laugh, "it is time to go now."

It was past midnight, and the streets were almost deserted, when a drowsy watchman, pacing his accustomed round, came suddenly on a scene that startled him into life.

On finding himself in the hands of the officers, the prisoner's self-possession entirely forsook him. His answers were so incoherent as to be wholly unintelligible.

At the inquest, Giraud testified to having accompanied his friend as far as their way lay in common, and that they had then separated for the purpose of going to their respective homes.

His story was this: He had been spending the evening—and so much he was able to prove—in a visit to a young girl to whom he was betrothed.

On his return, two men walking arm-in-arm, thrust before the street before him, continuing in the same direction as himself, but some distance in advance.

But a prisoner's statement, though all powerful against him, goes but a little way in exculpation. A verdict of "wilful murder" against Aubrey was returned by the jury, and he was fully committed for trial.

It was at this stage of the case I was retained for the defence. The task seemed hopeless enough. On the trial, the only facts in evidence would be those which told so damningly against the prisoner.

The poor widow never doubted her son's innocence. "He was always so good and gentle," she said. Still less would it have been possible to create a suspicion in her mind that her son was guilty of the crime.

Strange Coincidence.

The whole history of "sin found out" can furnish few incidents more striking than the following, from the Guadaloupe Times.

"On this night about ten o'clock, Mr. Job Drennan, his wife and two children, were returning home from the meeting, were shot by way-side assassins. Drennan was killed; his daughter, riding behind him on the same horse, received five wounds, and Mrs. D. received one severe wound.

"Next morning Judge Moore held an inquest on the body of Mr. Drennan. Among the evidence a piece of gun was found, but partially burned.

"These houses were already strongly guarded by citizens, whose suspicions were raised, waiting the officers' arrival. At Fred Kumala's house it was asked: 'Is Julius here?'

"But in passing the house Julius was seen through a window. The brothers were both arrested, and short-hand reporters to enable him to entertain and answer them, as well as his large family.

"A Remarkable Book. In 1868 P. T. Barnum wrote his Autobiography, which was published in Hartford, Conn., for which he paid him $15,000.

"The small-pox and affection both ruin a handsome face. Ultra modesty is very nearly allied to extreme vanity.

"Old age is often beautiful, and properly so, for it is the childhood of immortality. It is not a man's pedigree which we should care for, but only his virtues.

"Women are never cowards for others, though timid for themselves. That which we use and improve is ours; what we hoard is for some else.

"My God, man, he will not live to serve the half of it!" was the exclamation of a Boston Irishman, the other of whom he heard of. Friel, who killed a fellow in the station-house, had been sentenced to imprisonment for life.

"Sarah, make me $15 for that watch." Sarah makes the bid, which the husband refuses to take. Sarah then makes other offers for the rest of the articles, which her spouse habitually declines to accept.

"My dear sir, I assure you I was offered $15 for that article this very morning, and I refused to take it." And so he proceeds with the remainder of his goods, and in each instance swearing that he had such and such a bid already, which he refused.

"The literature of horrors, says the Academy, is soon to be enriched by the publication of a work that has unaccountably hitherto escaped the keen eyes of translator and book-maker. This distinguished gem is the Memories of Sanson, the hereditary assassin, who officiated at the decapitation of Louis XVI.

"A clergyman in Scotland desired his hearers never to call one another liars, but when any one said the thing that was not true they ought to whistle. One Sunday he preached a sermon on the parable of the leaven and false seed, being at a loss how to explain it, he said the leaven were not like those nowadays, they were as big as some of the hills in Scotland! He had scarcely pronounced the words when he heard a loud whistle.

"What is this, says he, 'o' me a liar?' 'It is I, Willy McDonald, the baker.'" "Well, Willy, what objection have ye to what I've told you?" "None, Miss John, only I want to know what sort of cream they had to bake those loaves in."
