A correspondent of the Oregonian

sends the following from Yakima: Farmers in the Yakima country are hopeful of at least an average crop for the country, notwithstanding the spring has been backward and cold. The weather is now quite warm, with occasional showers. Our people have commenced the culture of "hops" in this country, and at present prospects, they are very hopeful of a successful business in that line. Times are hard and money scarce. But in times of need our "Swauk" mines are panning out better at present than | people, they have at any time before. The original discovery party, headed by Tom Goodwin, are said to be doing well; have at last found the main lead and taking out regular pay-sometimes as high as $100 a day, with now and then a nugget. The largest reported this season is $75. Mr. Hatfield & Co. are preparing to work hill diggings, and Mr. Cooper and many others are getting good prospects and quite hopeful of success. A company of three men are also at work on the Peshastin. about twenty miles north of "Swauk" mines. They are prospecting a ledge of gold-bearing quartz that was discovered last fall by Mr. Culver and Marvery plainly, and is estimated to be worth between five and six hundred dollars per ton, They expect to have fatal. the ledge developed this season.

A boy was seen to suddenly shoot out of the door of a house and scramdle to the top of a board fence. His mothor was just an instant too late to catch him, and, concealing the potato masher behind her; she looked up to her son with a smile and said: "Come down darling."

"Not jess now!" replied the boy, sticking out his tongue at her. "Come down dear William' and will cut that pie," she continued.
"You can't fool me a cent's worth." he answered, hitching along.

"Won't you drop down here for just a mtnute?" she pleaded. "I tell you it's no use?" he exclaim ed, "Until I am throughly convinced that your intentions are pacific I shall remain situated at my present secure al-

A MILWAUKEE INCIDENT, -There is a lady out West who has the mistortune to talk in her sleep, and it is said she will answer unconsciously the questions which are secrets in her waking hours. She is waited upon by a timid young man who has never been able to screw his courage up to the "sticking-place," and ask her to marry him.

He went up one night recently, entering the front door, as was his labit, without ringing the bell, he saw his dulciens asleep on the parlor sofa. He Hesitated a moment over the propriety of advancing without announcing himself, when he heard his own name softly expressed from between those coral lips. Immediately the bent-up burden of his heart broke out in words:

"Dearest, do you love me?"
"Yes," was the soft response from the sleeper. "Will you marry me?" 4 Veg 11 "Shall it be in a year?"

"Let it be in six months." There was a moment's silence and suspense, when the lips again moved and the young man heard distinctly the little word, "May." He stepped eautionsly back and glided quietly from the facuse. May is a very pleasent month, but it was rather too soon for that young man.

A Kentucky paper, the Greenup Independent, says: "Daniel Feathers, a farmer living three mile below town, had the misfortune last week to be hitzan by a copperhead snake. Without hesitation he pulled out his jack kmfe, out the bitten spot out of his hand, and then struck a bee line for town, where Dr. Sellands dressed him externally as well as internally, and he is as well as ever excepting a slight swelling of the

A Brownsville special says General Cortinas has just been arrested and placed under guard by Col. Manuel Parole, of the Mexican regular cavalry. Cortinas' police have been arrested disarmed and imprisoned. There is great excitement at Matamoras, and trouble is anticipated. The government forces are in possession of the custom house buildings and are patroling the streets. They have two pieces of artillery at the custom house, and others at different portions of the city.

The death of Gen. Breckinridge leaves but four gentlemen living who have been elected to the second highest office in the United States. They are Hannibal Handlin, Andrew Johnson, Schuyler Colfax, and Henry Wilson. The mortality among Vice-Presidents does not seem to be as great as among the Presidents, Mr. Johnson is the only ex-President now living, and be was not elected to that office by the

> The New York Sunday News of the 13th inst., under the head of "Personal," has the following item relating to one of Oregon's prominent citizens: "Andew J. Dufer, of Oregon, Centennial Commissioner from that State, is prominent as a Democratic candidate for Con gressman. He is an old line Democrat of great integrity and untiring energy. For sometime past he has devoted himselt to building up the Order of Grangers in his State, and has succeeded in making it a power which has resulted in releasing Oregon from the grasp of the Republicans."

The Coos Bay News says John Miller, the purckaser of the Coos Bay wagon road, was arrested last week while on his way from Sacramento, to Oregon, and taken back to San Francisco on a special engine. He is charged with being a defaulter to the amount of about $200,300 to the Western Development Company, of which he was secretary and treasurer. He had been largely engagad in stock speculation and the great decline in value envolved him in heavy losses. He is charged with using funds in his hands with the hope of retrieving his losses.

something very beautiful and touching in the fidelity with which Dr. Living-stone's servants clung to him in his travels and sufferings. Three of those with him at his death had followed him for nine years, sharing his dangers, ministering to him in sickness, and rejoicing at his success. Nor did their love cease at his death. They were hundreds of miles from the sea coast, Between them and Dr. Livingstone's. English friends were swollen rivers to be torded, deserts to be crossed, mountains to be climbed, and savage tribes thurst-ing for blood. These poor servants might have been forgiven if they had quietly buried their dead master, with his papers, and consulted their own satety. But with a true nobility they set him to bake. Men came out white; ought more of him and his wish than of themselves. They resolved to carry his body back to his friend for burial, and to deliver all his papers and journals to those who would put them to a good use. In the face of difficulties almost unseparable they carried out their plan, and the world owes a debt of gratitude to these loving and true colored servants. All Dr. Livingstone's journals during the seven years of his last absence have been preserved by their fidelity.

Tuesday evening. June 29th, at Gervais fire broke out in the dwelling of Mr. A fire broke out in the dwelling of Mr. Mitchell, an old resident of that part of the country and a small trader, whose house was near the church. The family saved little, as the premises were consumed in twenty minute's time. Mitchell's family is so destitute by the fire that the neighbors were making a contribution for their assistance.

Acrimonious Criticism.

The following from the Pendleton Tribune of June 12th, is too good to be lost. Sarcastically speaking, it's the best thing ever spun from Mr. Abbott's pen. It is headed "Aerimonious Criticism," and it shoots it into the "General" as follows :

That sterling Democratic paper, the Albany Democrat, referring to the call of the Democratic State Central Committee for a meeting of that Committee on the 24th says: "We regard it as unfortunate that the Committee meetng was not called for an carlier date han the 24th of June. Now, we do not pretend to dictate.

It would be unparalleled presumption in us. But we woul mildly "suggest that such acrimonious criticism is burtful to the party, and ought to be substituted by a victorious fight on the common enemy. A Such "undue and 'asty criticisms" as the above, coming they do from that brave, and valiant, and battle-scarred soldier, General Martin Van Buren Brown, Esq., fill us with unutterable and unearthly pain and sorrow. We hope the General-who like Saul, and David, and Alexander, and Casar, and Napoleon, and Oliver Cormwell, has slain his thousands and tens of thousands and left their bones to bleach upon an hundred ensanguined battle-fields—will not consider it the ne plus ultra of impudence in us, if we express the opinion-as we now dothat the time set for the convocation of the Committee is, all things considered, about the best that could have been selected. Had it been called much earlier, those members of the Committee who live in Eastern Oregon, would not have had time to go down to Portland, and meet with the balance of the Committee. But, as it is, they have time now to arrange and go to the Valley; and if Eastern Oregon Interests are not properly represented, it certainly will not be the fault of Mr. Klippel, chairman of the Committee. We judge that he, at least, desires to deal out the same ju-tice to the Democracy living East of the Cascades that he would to those living in the Willamette Valley. We regret exceedingly that we are thus compelled to differ with General Vartin Ban Ruen Brown,-covered with glory and ponderously weighty and talented as he is; and we humbly hope that we have not committed the uppardonable sin by so doing. We are well aware that the General has been so long in the Democratic army, serving in camp and tented field, that his body is covand his posterior with very large Democratic cockle-burs. We admit that the

General's utterances ought to be considered oracular and conclusive; but,

being impressed with a conviction.

which fire cannot burn out of us, that Eastern Oregon has been immensely humbugged and swindled, on more than one occasion heretofore, by wire-pullers in the Valley; and having a strong desire to see our people fairly dealt by hereafter, we felt it to be our bounden duty, as a resident of Eastern Oregon, to differ as above with the puissant (not pismire) General. We cheerfully admit that the General is very talented, admit that the General is very talented, and wise, and that he possesses remarkable powers of statesmanship as well as military ability of no common order. Candidly we are of the opinion that were Alexander the Great, Romulus, Pompey, Cresar, Vespasian, Napoleon, Wellington, Cromwell, George, W.

Wellington, Cromwell, George W., Pope, Grant, Lee, Crockett, Boone and Wenap-snoot all boiled down and moulded into one perfect man, they would lack much of possessing the military power, ability and talent wrapped up in the epidermis and centered in the massive brain of the petite General.
When we view this subject from this stand-point we confess we tremble in our number sevens at the audacity and temerity which have led us to utter a single word in defence of Mr. Klippel. We bumbly trust that our General .-

refulgent with dazzling glory, and glistening epaulettes, and burnished blade of Damascene steel and jeweled hiltwill not again pen such " acrimonious criticisms" as those to which we have alluded; because they are unquestionably "hurtful to the party, and out to be substituted by a victorious fight on the common enemy;" and because also, we will be again placed under the very FAITHFUL TO THE LAST .- There painful necessity of uttering our protest, and thus placing ourself in seeming antagonism to the greatest Statesman, Jurist, Poet-ass-ter and General that > together in their primal purity, magnificence and glory. "Youbet." Here is the Yute account of creation: 'In the begining the earth was covered with mist. You could not see before you. The great spirit took his bow and shot-shot so well that he scattered the mist. The earth become visible to him, but there were no men upon it. Then he took clay, and fashioned a man and the first had not been strong enough. The Great Spirit began his work again, and this time the man came out quite black; it had remained too long in the oven. It was necessary to try the third time. The experiment at length succeeded, and the man came out done to a turn; he was the redskin, the most perfect of human types."

Washington President Twenty-three Years.

But ih the case of Washington it must be remembered that he was practically President from 1774 to 1797, a period of twenty-three years. As General of the armies he dictated to Congress the whole policy of the war of the Revolution. After his retiring from the command of the army, in 1786, he had an interregnum of a few years, durand education, and of a more perfect $30,000. union of the States, finally got together a number of delegates, from five States only, at his house at Mount Vernon, and there and at Alexandria, holding a sort of convention for the benefit of Kanawha, James River and Potomac Canal Navigation, projects yet unrealized, he and his friends initiated the movement for the Constitution of the United States. He became President of the Convention, and in 1787, only four years after he resigned command of the army, became virtually President, having, during all the interval about to sign it, he said, as a man who bas a right to say when the truth involves a menace, that if rejected, that The New York Directory contains Constitution could only be cancelled by 53,000 names, which is 24,000 more blood. Then followed the singularly idle period of voting on the new Constitution. New York forgot to hold an election. Congress called for the 4th of March, 1789, did not get a quorum until late in April, and yet during all the time Washington was as good as President, and served out a term before he commenced his formal Presidency. ed internal revenue guager for Washing- Then he went on and accepted two more terms, and finally stood aside to let other compatriots have their promotion.
