> THE DOG'S VICTORY .- There is nothing in the world that impresses a man so much as trust. Some years ago I was mastered by a dog in that way. He came into my garden, and he had no business there. Thinking that he would not improve my flower-bed, I walked along quietly and threw my stick at him, and thus advised him to go somewhere else. What did that He stopped, picked up the stick. wagged his tail, and came running to me with it, and laid the stick down at my feet. I felt ashamed of having thrown my stick. and the dog was told he might come round the garden when he liked.—Methodist.

Queer Results of Advertising.

The accident to which Orange Judd justice by owes the suddenness of his success was this: Mr. and Mrs. Judd lived, in their early history, in a modest house in a retired street in Flushing, L. I. Mr. Judd went to New York every day to work upon The American Arborium, a struggling paper sold at the rate of $1 a year, and in the evening he and his wife put up seeds in little paper bags, which were sold in the New York store. He kept an old horse for business purposes, that went by the and a simple pledge to do so would name of "the hair trunk," and it was a have satisfied the ladies and all present, standing joke in Flushing that the gentle-men would go to the city in the morning, passed Mr. Juid's horse at a certain point on the road, and, though he was evidently moving, it was at the same spot when they returned at night. The laugh was not all on one side for long. One day Mr. Judd sent a clerk out to collect some money, to the extent of $100, out of which he was to pay for the insertion of a two-line "ad" ance with the rules of the colony, and in a daily paper. Through a lucky stroke of stupidity the clerk left the "ad" and the $100 at the newspaper office, and said that it was to be inserted to that extent.
